To American Employers Study Britain's Problems To Solve Your Own—Make Work Attractive

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1925, by Star Co.

IN THIS blessed land of gold, prosperity and booms, we worry little about the unemployed. That good old saying, "The Devil take the hindmost," covers our unemployment problem fairly well, for the average man.

They are less fortunate in England. There the problem of employment, acute after the war, persists. The idle Britisher, not willing to be philosophical with an empty stomach and hungry children, has persuaded his government that it is not safe to leave him idle and penniless.

FROM THIS came the "unemployment dole," cash paid to every man idle through no fault of his own, and sufficient to keep body and soul together.

Here we should call that paternalism or Bolshevism. In Britain they call it a common sense way to avoid Bolshevism, and they are right. America's successful men have done little thinking about problems that they will have to face some day.

THE DOLE worries British taxpayers whose pockets supply it, and the workers, tired of idleness, with barely enough to keep them alive, are restless.

This young nation, when grown a little older, will meet the problems that worry old nations now.

MR. ALFRED MOND starts a violent discussion with this suggestion:

"Instead of paying a dole to idle workers, give it to business men as a subsidy, on condition that they spend the money hiring idle men, thus increasing business activity, and government revenue through increased income tax."

THIS SUGGESTION to make the dole subsidize the most depressed lines of industry, it is pointed out, would make no difference to the government or the taxpayers.

The money that must be spent anyhow might better be given to business men to hire labor on a subsidy basis, than merely paid out to keep men sitting about idle and demoralized.

THE PROBLEM is serious, for British taxpayers are paying the dole to 2,100,000 idle workers. Of these 400,000 are the "normally unemployable," the sub-normal, inefficient, that in old days would have been allowed to die of the rickets or wasting disease, in infancy, or to starve to death, at their leisure, as adults.

Public opinion, which means the powerful British Labor party, no longer permits leisurely starvation.

Against the dole subsidy for business plan violently attacked, it is argued that industries NOT getting the dole subsidy would soon develop a demand for it, as business men would shut down in order to be paid for resuming business and rehiring their men. It is stipulated in the plan, of course, that all hired men must be paid trade union wages.

IN THIS country it would be said off-hand, "if a business man is not able to make his business go without government help to pay his workmen, let him go out of business."

That sounds convincing, but when you see railroads authorized by government to raise rates and the public compelled to pay the raise as more money is needed, you realize that even this glorious republic resorts to the subsidy, when men well organized and sufficiently powerful demand it.

MR. GEORGE W. HINMAN, whose thoughtful writings represent the American business man well, asks, "did radicalism get its death blow last November 4, or is there more to come?"

There is a three-part answer to that.

PIN HOPE ON QUESTION: DOES EVOLUTION DENY DIVINE BIRTH THEORY?

Courthouse, Dayton, Tenn., July 16 (I.N.S.).—With the end of the trial in sight counsel for John Thomas Scopes fought with their backs to the wall today to broadcast to a waiting world the scientific theories about evolution.

The State stood between them and their goal, its spokesmen fiercely opposing this testimony as prejudicial to the minds of the farmer-jury which sits in judgment. The decision will rest with Judge John T. Raulston after opposing lawyers have done their best to win his mind. Upon his judicial opinion will hang the future of the case and the defense's only chance of winning an acquittal.

This battle, legal in character, will be based on a hypothetical question, propounded by the defense counsel, to Professor Maynard M. Metcalf,

LOTTA'S 'DAUGHTER' TO PAY LAWYER $100,000

A fee of $100,000 was promised Attorney Florian & Arey of Boston for representing Mrs. Ida Manning Blakenburg of Tulsa, Okla., claimant to the Crabtree millions, Mrs. Blankenburg testified today in Suffolk Probate Court where she is trying to prove herself the daughter of the late Lotta Crabtree.

The claimant told of the proposed fee in answer to a question by Attorney James M. Hoy, who as counsel for another claimant, Mrs. Carlotta Cockburn of California, was cross-examining Mrs. Blankenburg.

Mrs. Blankenburg did not say that

COOL WAVE DUE IN BOSTON TOMORROW

Cheerio, people! Cool weather is on the way. The high pressure area that Forecaster Loveland noted in the Northwest on Wednesday has reached Chicago and the forward edge of it will reach Boston tomorrow and will take two or three days to pass over giving the Hub and all New England some fair, cool days.

Today's hot and humid weather promises to break up in thunderstorms tonight.

Parts of the plains country beyond the Mississippi River, where temperatures of 101 degrees were reported on Wednesday, are feeling the effects of the cool wave today and temperatures of 80 degrees are reported only from the Gulf States.

STORM SHIELDS THUGS IN $40,000 GEM THEFT

New York, July 16 (I.N.S.).—Taking advantage of the rain storm early today to cover their movements, five thugs walked into Stanley's jewelry store at No. 269 West 125th street, cowed the clerks with revolvers, handcuffed them, drove them into a rear room and then leisurely cleaned out the vault of diamonds and jewelry, escaping with more than $40,000 worth of valuables. They escaped in an auto.

SCOPES LAW GIANTS IN ACTION

They are not battling over the fate of man. The life, liberty, happiness or fortunes of no one depends upon their victory or defeat. These "legal giants"—Bryan and Darrow—are locked in combat at Dayton, Tenn., over how man had his inception, what originated him and started him on his way down through the ages. Was it an ape or wasn't it? Man's start, not his end, is the issue, and no matter what the result of their fight may be the world will wag on.

SIX 'NO BILLS' IN PICKWICK CASE; 12 TO TRY

The Pickwick Club investigation, in progress for more than ten days, was completed today by the Suffolk County Grand Jury.

In its final report the Grand Jury returned no bills against Charles R. Gow, John H. Mahony, Joseph A. Tomasello, Nathan Ginsburg, Chas. A. Leary and Charles E. Kendall.

Gow had a contract to construct cement posts in the garage under construction adjoining the Pickwick Club. Mahony was building commissioner for Boston at the time of the disaster.

Tomasello was engaged in excavating for the new garage. Gins-

COOLIDGE TO INSPECT DEVENS TOMORROW

President Calvin Coolidge and perhaps Mrs. Coolidge, too, will inspect Camp Devens tomorrow and review the entire 26th Division.

The President is expected to spend the greater part of the day at the cantonment.

Major-General Edward L. Logan, commander of the division, who made the announcement today of President Coolidge's coming, went to White Court, the Summer White House at Swampscott, and arranged details of the visit with the nation's chief executive.

Accompanying General Logan in the call at White Court were Major Slater Washburn and Captain Louis B. Morse of the divisional staff.

BOY PLUNGES 50 FEET CHASING DOG ON ROOF

Becoming enthusiastic in chasing his pet dog over the roof of his home at No. 157 Trenton street, East Boston, eight-year-old James Kanall fell from the roof to an alleyway, a distance of 50 feet.

The lad lay unconscious in the alleyway for some time until the furious scratching of the dog on the roof skylight aroused other members of the family and they discovered the little fellow.

A passing machine was commandeered and "Jimmie" was rushed to the East Boston Relief Hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from a fractured skull, broken right collarbone, dislocated right elbow, broken right wrist and fractured left leg.

After being given first aid treatment by Dr. Arthur G. Holland, at the Relief Hospital, the child was rushed to the City Hospital.

MOTHER OF 5 AND MELROSE YOUTH KILLED BY AUTOS

A sixty-six-year-old mother of five children and a youth of nineteen were killed today in two automobile accidents.

Swerving his truck to avoid hitting a boy riding a bicycle, Fred C. Sargent, Salem contractor, drove over the curb in Salem and knocked down and instantly killed Mrs. Philomene Bouchard.

An overloaded Ford roadster, carrying 11 persons, according to the police, collided with another machine in Wakefield, killed George Cronin of Melrose and caused serious injuries to Harry Doucette, also of Melrose.

The driver of the roadster, David L. Doucette of No. 182 Linwood avenue, Melrose, brother of the injured man, was arraigned in Malden District Court on a charge of manslaughter and reckless driving.

Cronin, who lived at No. 58 Willow street, Melrose, was riding with a friend, who was turning his car into the yard of his home, No. 816 Maine street, Wakefield, when the roadster crashed into it. He died at Melrose Hospital.

Harry Doucette, living at Folsom avenue, Melrose, is under treatment at the same hospital.

The roadster, according to Wakefield police, was stopped a few minutes before the accident by Patrolman Gates who ordered eight of the men to get off. The police say they got off but boarded the car again a short distance away and were in it at the time of the crash.

Witnesses of the Salem tragedy exonerated Sargent, the driver of the truck, according to Police Lieutenant Gideon Pelletier, who made an investigation. The accident occurred at Lafayette and Leavitt streets.

Sargent said that an automobile in front of him swung aside suddenly, revealing a small boy on a bicycle. As he prepared to veer to one side, the boy, apparently alarmed at the noise of a heavy truck approaching behind him, changed his course, skidded and fell in the path of the truck.

JACKSON'S ACT WAS HASTENED BY FULLER

James F. Jackson issued a statement today explaining why he resigned the chairmanship of the public trustees of the Boston Elevated yesterday.

In it he made it plain that his retirement was at least hastened by differences of opinion between himself and Governor Fuller.

"I acknowledge the right of a Governor to advise State officials as to what State policies they should carry out," he said, "even to his right to advise such officials to retreat from a position already taken, learned scientist, authority on evolution and zoological expert and head of the biology department at Johns Hopkins University.

SCOPES JUDGE IS FORCED TO STUDY EVOLUTION THEORY

COLLEGE SAVANT TESTIFIES DARWIN WAS RIGHT

It is: "Does the voluntary theory of man descending from a lower order of animals conflict with the Biblical story of the Divine creation of man?"

The master minds of science--Metcalf and others--will testify, if permitted, that the scientific theory and Biblical story do not conflict. They will say, if permitted, that the two are reconcilable.

But the State will not permit them to answer, except over a pile of objections and the indications were that somewhere the court will sustain an objection. The State took this stand on the ground that the testimony by scientists about evolution was "incompetent and irrelevant because it rested solely with the jury to decide whether the evolutionary theory conflicted with the Biblical story of the Divine creation of man.

JURY OF "OPEN MIND.".

William Jennings Bryan, Jr., son of the Commoner, and Attorney-General A. T. Stewart were to lead the State's forces in defending this contention. It was to be young Bryan's first active appearance in the trial.

To this premise the defence offered a vigorous objection. They pointed out that the twelve good men and true all have testified, when questioned as veniremen, that they heard little discussion about evolution, had not made up their minds what it meant and were open to being convinced one way or the other on its relation to the Biblical origin of man.

The defence further charged that of all the spectators at the trial these twelve farmers should be the first to learn about evolution. Up to this moment the jurors have been barred even from hearing the evolutionary discussions between attorneys.

And they have heard not one word from the scientists, even though ultimately they will be called upon to decide whether Scopes taught the thing, and, if he did, whether his particular lesson conflicted with the Divine story about the beginning of man.

WHAT EVOLUTION IS.

With the jury sitting on the lawn outside, herded away from the radio by deputy sheriffs, Metcalf told the lawyers and visiting fans that the world is 600,000,000 years old, that evolution is the most difficult thing in the world to define, "and that man is not as highly evolved as some other animals."

"He described evolution as the change of an organism from one set of characteristics into a different condition, with different characteristics.

If the court does decide that these scientists cannot talk before the jury, the Scopes defense will collapse. The defendant himself cannot take the stand because his counsel waived the right by calling a scientist first.

There will follow a motion to instruct the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty, which will be overruled, a barrage of closing arguments and the jury will retire to bring in a verdict of guilty.

With the scientists barred, the trial should end Saturday but may drag over until Monday. If they are permitted to testify, which is unlikely, the trial may last all Summer for witnesses for the defense will recite virtually the history of the world.

This history of the world will be a history of biology, geology, zoology, agriculture, botany and every other subject that involves the question of evolution.

Thus a dispute over a monkey—and a theoretical monkey at that—has brought a dozen solemn and learned scientists to this country town to outline the history of the world, which they say is more than six hundred million years old.

One of the big developments of the day was the promise of William Jennings Bryan to prove that his fundamentalist views of religion and his Jeffersonian views of politics are not in conflict.

BIBLE IN COURT RECORD.

The Bible was entered into the court record when Mr. Stewart offered in evidence the first two chapters of Genesis, which give the account of the creation upheld by the Tennessee law. Mr. Hayes at once objected, much to Stewart's surprise, and elaborated his objection by asking what Bible it was which the Tennessee Legislature had specified and how Mr. Stewert could be sure that he was offering the right one.

In support of his theory, "What is the Bible?" Mr. Hayes argued that there was the Hebrew Bible, the Catholic Bible and the Protestant Bible, all three differing in the number of books and sometimes in the context itself. The court overruled the objection, however.

A youngster in white duck trousers and a white shirt open at the neck, very wide-eyed and excited, then sat down in the big witness chair. He was Howard Morgan, 14 years old, and he identified the book, "General Science," from which Scopes taught.

"What did he teach?"

TEACHINGS OF SCOPES.

"He taught that in the beginning, the earth was a hot mass, too hot to sustain life, and that it cooled off and life began as a one-celled animal. Then it got onto the land and began to develop and had its climax in man."

He also taught, continued the lad, that man had reasoning powers which animals did not have, which led Darrow to remark:

"There is some doubt about that?"

Mr. Darrow contented himself with a few questions in cross-examination and ended by asking Howard:

"It hasn't hurt you any, has it?"

"No," said the boy, confidently.

Harry Shelton, 17 years old, wasn't nearly as good a witness as Howard because all he could remember of his Spring biology lesson was that Scopes had taught that all forms of life began with the same cell.

F. E. Robinson, proprietor of the drug store "where it all began" and a member of the School Board, said that he had sold the books which Scopes used in his classes, and that they had been provided by the State.

Judge Too Busy to Act as Usher at Ape Trial

Dayton, Tenn., July 16 (A.P.).—The issues in the Scopes case are serious and Judge Raulston refuses to have his attention drawn from them while he acts as usher for the spectators, he has announced.

Twice during the sultry afternoon voices arose from the perspiring crowd, appealing to the Judge for chairs.

As the jury was entering the box for the first time since its selection, the voice of a newspaper reporter rang out:

"Can we have chairs, Judge?"

"Gentlemen, I do not believe the whole court room should expect the Judge to look after chairs. Let the sheriff do that. Appeal to the sheriff," the Judge replied.

A second similar request later brought the assertion that "it was foolish to expect the Judge of the Court to provide chairs for everybody, to leave the bench and have everybody move back. Appeal to the sheriff and executive officers because I have as many responsibilities as I can get along with without having to attend to these details."

Evolution Chain No Stronger Than Lost Link, Says Expert

Prof. Snooper, Own Witness at Scopes Trial, Concludes the Case Is 'In the Bag'

By PAUL WHELTON,
World Champion Monkey Chaperon and Ape Interpreter.

Dayton, Tenn., July 16.—The observations of Professor Simeon Snooper, leading anti-evolutionist, but also anti-Bryan, took a serious turn today when he came out with the flat announcement that "this here Scopes trial is in the bag."

Many of the Daytonians present fainted at the mere suggestion and one Tennessean with a lean and hungry face took ten looks at Simeon and fainted ten times.

This was marked up as a record, the man's previous mark being nine faints two years ago, when a world-hardened and sophisticated tooth paste drummer mentioned a girl's "legs" in the lobby of the Hotel Aqua, instead of saying "limbs."

"I may be a lowly anthropoid and also a writing expert," declared Simeon, doggedly, in the face of the ensuing denouement, "but I am captain of my soul. This here trial is in the bag."

AND YET, IT SEEMS——

"Undoubtedly," I chided, "you have a substantial reason for the advancing of a charge so fraught with sombre import in its threat against the pursuit of happiness and what we of old Seville have long been proud to refer to as Liberte, Ega"te et Fraternite."

"I am not up on Seville and your words seem to have encountered a traffic jam," choufed the professor, sternly, "but deep in the current of the narrow, muddy Scopes stream I can glimpse a bit of subterfuge."

"You forget," I was urged to remind him, "that your presence here at the trial has been a succession of subterfuges." I named them.

"You have slipped into the honorable court——"

"Honorable court?" he flared.

HIM AS HAS, HAS MORE.

"You have inveigled your way into court as 'A Kiss in the Dark,' as 'One-Eyed Connolly,' as 'A Bucket of Lemonade,' as 'Three Sheets in the Wind,' as 'A Maiden's Prayer,' and as the eleventh commandment, framed by you after observing the liquor-absorbing propensities of your neighbors, i. e., 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's stuff.'"

"You are trivial," Simeon sneered. "One should not quarrel with a small nature. I can see it all, now. You are just another proof of the shortcomings of your human race."

"Then not yet, Professor, are you convinced that a true chain of evolution is being welded here in dear old Dayton for the enlightment of the world?"

"Convinced?" he jibed. "A chain is no stronger than its missing link—and while there is, in my mind, a suspicion that such missing link may be William Jennings Bryan or the late Mr. Foster, who went to Gloucester, I have yet to be shown and inspired with belief."

HORNS ON, THAT'S ALL.

"You do not mention the rhinoceros, who, although, he wears his own horn, does not blow it, thus lending a suspicion that he is a bit off somewhere."

The Professor evinced awakening interest.

"You mention the rhinoceros," he said, "but in so doing, you have committed the common error of peoples not familiar with the peoples of the jungle, say, for instance, in the Soho district of Congo, where I was brought up."

"While the rhino may be suspected of being a bit offish," continued Simeon, "this is explained by those in the know. Rightfully the rhino is named in the jungle the rhino-serious and for the explanation I am deeply indebted to Ed Wynn, who gave it to the world in his religious tract, 'Perfect Fools—and Novices,' 25 cents a copy, a shilling in London, quatre franc dans Paris, und so weiter. (adv.)."

AS SAD AS BUNYON.

"You interest me deeply," I urged.

"The rhino-serious has never had a coming-out party he has never a coming-out party; he has never read aloud the titles and sub-titles in a movie; he has never had a drink of beer and he has never known the thrill of filling a monkey-flush or drawing to an inside straight.

"In fact the rhino-serious has had no pleasure at all during his entire life. That's why he is called the rhino-serious."

So we kidded a bit on this and went over the Scopes comedy, where we slipped in, disguised as "Me and My Boy Friend."

Hack Driver Won't Run Auto; Gives Up His Job

Brockton, July 16.—After driving the local depot hack for 39 years, John F. Buckley, 67, of No. 404 Main street, today gave up his job when his employer told him he would have to learn to drive an automobile.

"I've driven all sorts of horses, plugs and nags in my time," said Buckley to his employer, George E. Holmes, "but I'm not going to learn anything about those gasolene buggies."

STATE BLAMED FOR LITTER ON REVERE BEACH

In the fact of indignant charges by habitues that Revere beach is "frightfully littered" daily, officials of the Metropolitan Park Commission at Revere retorted today, just as indignantly, that the complainers themselves are to blame.

Indirectly the blame is put also up to Governor Fuller, who, in paring the State budget, leaned a heavy axe on the park department appropriation, the slicing being reflected in Revere's apportionment.

Last year the Metropolitan Park Department had $60,000 to work with at Revere Beach, resulting in a sufficient number of employes. This year only $25,000 was allowed and only nine men are employed cleaning the beach daily.

LITTER IT TOO QUICKLY.

Revere Beach, insofar as it is under Park Department control, officials explained today, stretches for three and one-half miles along a wide expanse.

Each morning at 7:30 the cleaners go out on the beach, armed with baskets, a "pick stick" that carries a spike in one end, and with a cart following them.

Beginning at Condit's dance hall at the south end, the men work to the north until they have reached the Point of Pines.

But it takes them two and one-half days of labor to cover the entire beach, and when they have reached the north end, the south part is littered just as badly as when they began, according to officials.

Because of the tremendous throng of bathers that gather at the beach every day the workers cannot continue their beach-cleaning after 12 o'clock noon, and each day's gathering piles more refuse on the sands.

BATHERS ARE BLAMED.

None but the beach frequenters themselves are to blame for the filthy condition of the beach, it is pointde out.

While refuse barrels are stationed in great number along the entire strand, few people take the pains to deposit their newspapers, lunch boxes, sandwich fragments, banana and orange peels, bottles, cans, discarded clothing or other "junk" in the barrels, it is alleged.

Instead, everything is left on the beach when the bathers and watchers go home.

Theer are many public-spirited citizensai n Revere who favor arrest for those who litter the sands, it was learned today, but contemplation of any such drastic action has not been announced.

PUBLIC SERVICE WORKERS FIGHT INCOME TAXES

Washington, July 16 (I.N.S.).—Seeking to upset the ruling of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, that employes of State and municipal public utilities corporations must file Federal income tax returns, a test case has been started before the Board of Tax Appeals, it was learned at the Treasury today.

The cases will be appealed from the decision of the Treasury by employes of municipal corporations in Chicago. Officials said that from these appeals, which probably will go to the Supreme Court, a definite precedent on a moot question will be set.

POISON BOOZE KILLS MAN AS HE SLEEPS

John J. Joyce, formerly of South Boston, died while asleep under a tree on River street, North Weymouth, after drinking whiskey purchased by his companion, John McGuire, according to the Weymouth police.

McGuire, the police say, told them that he and Joyce bought a bottle of whiskey and went to the river bank to drink it. They both went to sleep and when he awoke, nearly 24 hours later he tried to arouse Joyce and found he had died.

Death was due to acute alcoholism, according to Medical Examiner Fred Jones of Quincy.

16 HURT IN RIOT OF WELSH MINE STRIKERS

Cardiff, Wales, July 16 (A.P.)—Sixteen men were injured today in a collision between striking miners and police at a rock colliery at Glynneath. Five thousand strikers surrounded the pits, where seven hundred miners still stuck to their work. A force of one hundred police was called to disperse them, and the clash ensued. After the trouble the remaining miners decided to quit and the colliery was closed.

MEXICAN GENERALS IN DEATH DUEL FOR GIRL

Mexico City, July 16.—The capital is again face to face with a scandal in high life. Two of the most prominent generals in the Mexican army are said to have fought a duel to the death over a Mexican showgirl, according to El Universal. It is understood it was the tragic culmination of a triangular love affair, although the police are suppressing all names and details.

COOLIDGE WILL VISIT DEVENS TOMORROW

company commanders that the President was coming, there was a rush to prepare for the big review. The honor of a presidential review is something that seldom comes to National Guard divisions, and buttons threatened to pop from olive drab blouses as chests swelled in contemplation of the tribute.

GUNS TO BOOM SALUTE.

The President's inspection lent an impetus to the activities of everybody from colonels down to privates doing kitchen police duty.

The first tangible result of the announcement by General Logan was the roaring by a first sergeant for a "detail to stick up the new flagpole."

President Coolidge will bring with him his house guests at White Court, his staff, secret service men, secretaries and the press correspondents.

The party is expected to time their arrival to reach the Ayer camp about 10:30 tomorrow forenoon. The President will be greeted at the main entrance of Camp Devens by Major-General Logan and his entire staff.

Field guns of a battery of the 102d Field Artillery will boom the presidential salute, welcoming the division's guest and incidentally warning the soldiers to "snap into it for 'Cal.'"

PREPARE FOR REVIEW.

President Coolidge will make a tour of inspection of the camp directly after his arrival. Following his inspection, he and his entire party will sit down to luncheon with Colonel Logan and his staff, orders having already been issued to the staff cooks to prepare a special meal for the occasion.

The big review will come in the afternoon, and by the rush of activities at Devens today this is going to be one big parade nobody will try to "duck out of."

JACKSON TELLS WHY HE QUIT

a position taken by them to protect important public interests, as they believe.

Mr. Jackson was one of the trustees who recently tried to bring about a new method of arbitration with the Elevated employes. The men objected and threatened to strike.

He said that if the strike materialized he would dismiss the trustees.

The Governor's statement ended a crisis that seemed at one time certain to lead to a walkout. As soon as the excitement died away Mr. Jackson resigned.

BOY SOBS FOR MOTHER HE SHOT BY ACCIDENT

New York, July 16.—"Mother, mother," sobbed seventeen-year-old Joseph Gross in his cell today. The boy, who accidentally shot and killed his mother in his home at No. 67 Sayre street, Jamaica, N. Y., is being held for arraignment and, police said, will be charged with homicide. The tragedy occurred just after the youth had returned from Omaha. He was showing his mother a supposedly empty gun when it went off, killing the mother instantly.

LOTTA'S 'CHILD' TO PAY LAWYER $100,000

the fee was dependent on her winning the case. Asked if she had agreed to split her share in the $3,000,000 estate fifty-fifty with Attorney Norvell of Tulsa, who at one time was her counsel in the will contest, she did not reply as the question was excluded by thec ourt on objection of the claimint's counsel.

HAS FOUR LAWYERS.

Attorney Arey is associate counsel in the case, the others, representing the alleged daughter of the famous actress being Attorney Thomas J. Barry, J. Weston Allen and Grover Cleveland Spillers, the latter of Tulsa.

Mrs. Blankenburg denied that immediately after Lotta Crabtree's death she told friends in Tulsa that she was the logical heir to the big estate which was left, for the most part, to charity and World War veterans.

Attorney Hoy, reading from a deposition made by her last April, before she came East, revealed that the claimant also denied that she "attempted to bolster up failing credit" by saying she might inherit Lotta's wealth.

Asked by Hoy about seeming discrepancies between her answers in court and answers given in the deposition, the claimant said:

READY TO ADMIT ERROR.

"I am human like everybody else. I make mistakes, I suppose."

Q.—Now, did Lotta tell you about a chateau she owned in England? A.—No.

Q.—Well, if you said in the deposition, that she did, do you claim that is a stenographer's mistake? A.—It may be my own mistake or it may be a stenographer's.

MEETS OLD SWEETHEART ON VISIT; THEY WED

Brockton, July 16.—William E. Julius of No. 13 Haverhill street, World War veteran and shoeman, returned for a visit to his old home in Italy, little suspecting that romance was waiting for him under the soft skies along the Mediterranean.

Back in the old town he left as a mere stripling, William met his old friends. Among these was an old sweetheart.

It came time for William to return to his home in the New World. Suddenly it dawned on the couple that it would be an ordeal for them to part. Three days before William's boat sailed, the blushing couple called on the parish priest.

CARDINAL BEGIN IS SLIGHTLY IMPROVED

Quebec, July 16 (A.P.).—A slight improvement in the condition of Cardinal Begin, dangerously ill at the Archbishop's palace here, was reported today. His physicians' bulletin said:

"The Cardinal's condition is a little better this morning. He passed a fairly good night and his medical attendants, after their visit, declared they still had hopes that his illness would not prove fatal."

STRIKE OF FITCHBURG COAL TEAMSTERS ENDS

Fitchburg, July 16—Thirty chauffeurs, teamsters and yardmen of the Fitchburg Coal Company, who went on strike in protest against a wage cut, instituted March 20, returned to work as a result of a compromise, being granted a 2-cent-per-hour increase, which reduced the March cut by 50 per cent.

LINEMAN IS BADLY BURNED WHILE ALOFT

Anthony Campbell, thirty-five, of No. 1 Edge Hill road, Saugus, a lineman in the employ of the Fred T. Ley Company, was severely burned about the face and arms when his face came in contact with a high voltage wire as he was at work on an electric light pole on Commercial street, Malden.

LYNN TO PROBE FIRE HAZARD IN CITY

LYNN WILL PROBE FIRE HAZARD

Inefficiency Charged by National Underwriters; Call Alarm System Good

"A poorly trained fire department," is the characterization of the Lynn Fire Department made by engineers of the National Board of Fire Underwriters who recently made a survey of the city.

Nine imperative recommendations are made by the engineers in their report which has been submitted to the Lynn Chamber of Commerce. Of these, the training of the personnel of the department is one of the most important.

RAP FIRE ALARM STATION.

The underwriters praised many things about the Lynn fire department. The water pressure they found entirely adequate, with a supply of water available for the fighting of any kind of a fire, while the equipment of the fire department was also found to be in tip-top shape.

The city's fire alarm system, while entirely adequate to handle all demands made upon it, has its central station in a building that is not fire-proof, which is taken to constitute a fire menace.

MAKE RECOMMENDATIONS.

Recommendations deemed most important are that a drill tower and school be provided; that fire headquarters be removed to a detached fireproof building; box locations in closely built sections be indicated by red lights; a city ordinance calling for roofs of non-combustible material; adoption of a complete building code by ordinance to conform to modern requirements; extension of the fire limits district, and automatic sprinkler equipment be required on all buildings which might act as conflagration breeders.

For the fire department, more suitable height and weight limits are recommended, and a retiring age of sixty-two years.

BROCKTON MAN FIGHTS TO GET WIFE INTO U. S.

Brockton, July 16.—Having failed in his appeals to the King of Italy to aid him in getting his wife and six children to this country, Gastone Leone of No. 74 Leyden street, has appealed to the United States government through Congressman Louis Frothigham.

He hopes before another year passes to be a full-fledged American. He is ready for his final papers. Leone first came to America in 1895, but returned a few years later and was married. When the World War broke out he again returned to Italy and served with the Italian army for nearly three years. Immigration authorities refuse to allow his wife to enter.

WOLF'S COMET BACK ON ITS 6TH SWING

The Harvard College observatory received a cable from the Central Bureau of Astronomical Telegrams at Copenhagen, announcing the observation by the Astronomer Stobbe, on July 13, of Wolf's comet. This presumably refers to the comet discovered in 1884, with a periodic reappearance about once every 6½ years.

This is the first news of the comet's sixth reappearance, for which astronomers have been watching for some time.

PLYMOUTH COUNTY G. A. R. HOLDS SUMMER MEETING

Norwell, July 16.—The Plymouth County G. A. R. and relief corps held their annual mid-Summer convention at Ridge Hill Grove. Veterans from all parts of the county and some from other parts of the State were present.

J. S. Gray of Rockland, commander of the Plymouth county G. A. R., presided.

K. C. FETE FOR NEW LEADER

Dr. Harry F. McLeod of Boston Elected Head of Alhambra

A celebration is planned for the home-coming of Dr. Harry F. MacLeod of Dorchester, elected Supreme Commander of the Order of the Alhambra, at the biennial convention of the order which closes in Atlantic City, today.

The Boston man won the highest office in the organization only after a hard struggle, in which John J. Kelley of Chicago frequently threatened to emerge the victor. It was the closest fight ever waged in the order, but when the Pennsylvania delegation swung over to the Boston man success was assured.

HONOR CAVANAGH, TOO.

Granada Caravan of Boston is the largest caravan of the order in the United States, and today arrangements are being completed to greet the new head of the organization. Not only will the home-coming honor Dr. MacLeod but it will also pay tribute to James F. Cavanagh of Everett, whose oratory was no small factor in swinging the convention to Dr. MacLeod, and who himself was elected to the office of national vizier of the order, being one of five men selected.

Mr. Cavanagh is a former member of the Massachusetts Senate and is noted as an orator.

The Boston delegation attending the convention is expected home at the end of the week, although the local lodgemen have not yet been informed as to the exact time of the home-coming.

PARADE TO BE HELD.

The train bearing the delegates or the boat, should they come by water, will be met by the local lodgemen and a parade will be held in honor of the victorious Bostonians.

The other grand officers elected at the convention, which selected San Francisco as the next place of meeting, are:

William J. Butler of Wilkesbarre, vice-supreme commander; William Schwab of New York, supreme scribe; William J. Boyle, Springfield, Mass., supreme chamberlain; John J. Diamond of Philadelphia, supreme organizer; F. William Johenning of Baltimore, supreme captain of the bodyguard; Hon. James F. Cavanagh of Boston, James A. Quinn of Albany, William Schissen of Buffalo, John Iapen of New Orleans and William Madigan of Cleveland, supreme viziers.

GIRL SAVES DROWNING BOY AS CHUM DIES

Stow, July 16.—George Hendrick, ten years old, of Maynard, was drowned in Lake Boone when he went to the aid of a companion who could not swim. The two had been in a canoe which overturned. Hendrick managed to make the shore, but saw that his chum, Waino Servio of Maynard, was in difficulties. He turned back to help him and went under.

MEDFORD OFFICIAL RESIGNS UNDER FIRE

Hearings which the Medford board of aldermen has been conducting for six weeks on the case of Joseph J. Fitzgerald, chairman and agent of the board of public welfare, who was dismissed on May 27 by Mayor Coolidge "for the good of the service," came to abrupt end when Fitzgerald turned in his resignation.

BOY'S HAND NEARLY CUT OFF BY BOTTLE

Westfield, July 16.—The right arm of John Bujnowsky, four years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Bujnowsky of Otis street, was nearly severed at the wrist when the boy fell on a broken bottle. It is feared that he will be permanently crippled so far as the free use of his right hand is concerned.

Sea Cadets in Brazil

The Massachusetts nautical training ship Nantucket, Captain Rust, arrived Monday at Bahia, Brazil, from Rio de Janeiro and will remain there six days, proceeding then to Port Spain, Trinidad. On board are 118 cadets.

WANTS TO BE FIRST GIRL TO WIN TITLE

Lillian Harrison of Buenos Aires, a powerful swimmer, is today trying to cross the English Channel from the French side. If she succeeds, she will be the first woman to get through where many men have failed. When she went in, wind and tide were in her favor, and her trainer was confident. Her last message was that she not only would make the swim, but that she would walk up the beach at Dover, the finishing point, unassisted.

GIRL SWIMMER TRIES TO MAKE CHANNEL

Boulogne, France, July 16 (I.N.S.).—Determined to accomplish what no girl ever has been able to do, Miss Lillian Harrison of Buenos Aires, favored by the best of weather and a smooth sea, started out from Cape Griz-Nez at 4:29 today in her attempt to swim the English Channel.

A tug carrying newspaper reporters and sportsmen accompanied the girl. Before the start, she predicted she would reach the British shore near Dover and walk up the beach unassisted.

A small crowd cheered the girl as she started the difficult swim.

Burgess, her trainer, said Miss Harrison had shown extraordinary strength in her preparations and was of the opinion she had a good chance of accomplishing the feat.

CAPE COD HOSPITAL TO PUT ON DRIVE FOR $150,000

Hyannis, July 16.—At a meeting of the directors of the Cape Cod Hospital, arrangements were made for a mid-Summer campaign for funds. It was announced that the hospital needs a minimum of $150,000. There are a mortgage and other loans aggregating $60,000, which must be paid to free the institution of the constant drain of interest charges. The balance is needed to meet maintenance and operating charges during the next three years.

HOLD EX-COUNCILMAN IN WORCESTER THEFT

Worcester, July 16—The case of Davis E. Freeman, former member of the Worcester city council, who pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny of automobile tires from Nathan Goldsmith, dealer, was continued to July 23.

'THRILL SLAYER' NOW SOUGHT IN CAPITAL

Washington, July 16.—The hunt for Philip K. Knapp, who is said to have killed a Hempstead, L. I., taxicab driver for the sake of a thrill, centred here today following reports that the college-bred army deserter and a girl companion were in hiding in this city.

An army officer and the manager of a Connecticut avenue gasoline station have identified photographs of Knapp as likenesses of the furtive-eyed stranger dressed in army shirt and trousers who drives a low hung red roadster with a New York license after dark.

The man, who has not been seen in the daytime, is accompanied by a dark-eyed, bobbed-haired girl. The car he drives has been seen parked in front of a fashionable apartment house which is being kept under police surveillance in the hope that he will reappear.

Police are scanning every automobile in the city and keeping a close watch in the neighborhood where Knapp was reported in hope that they may be able to arrest the deserter and alleged murderer before he leaves Washington. Instructions were given all detectives to treat the suspect as a dangerous character in arresting him.

LEXINGTON TO HAVE NEW BUSINESS ZONE

After debate of more than an hour it was voted at the special Lexington town meeting adjourned from June 25, to amend the zoning law so as to allow the establishment of a new business district at Massachusetts avenue and Bow street, East Lexington.

SPENT MONEY WITH LAVISH HAND

Edward Kilgore, fourteen years old, is back in his home at Wakefield, his boyish dream of becoming the "Millionaire Bootblack of New York" sadly shattered.

When Edward set forth from home last Monday, with $80 of his father's money tucked away in his trousers pocket, the World was his oyster and he intended opening it. For months he had dreamed of going to New York and starting at the foot of the ladder with his shoe shining box, work his way up until he became the "Bootblack King," worth millions.

Instead of being established in his own business in New York, however, Edward is back in his parents' home, after having been ignominiously taken into custody by the police of Worcester.

Edward contains in his make-up all the elements of a real boy. When he left home and came to Boston on the trolley, the first thing he sought was a bicycle. He decided to go to New York on the machine, that he might see some of the country en route.

The tires on the bicycle weren't so good and when both of them went flat near Milbury, the machine was abandoned by the side of the road. The lad walked into Milbury and spent the night.

Still eschewing railroad trains, the boy decided that hiking to New York and the crown of the "Bootblack King" that awaited him was the ideal thing. He started to hike, going in the general direction of Worcester.

A pup confined in a yard along the side of the road attracted the boy's attention. He entered the yard and played with the pup, finally deciding he wanted the dog.

He called at the farmhouse and promptly offered the farmer $10 for the dog. The farmer was taken aback by the offer. The dog was a mongrel and had he been offered one dollar for the animal would gladly have taken it. There is a strong probability he would have given the dog away.

But $10 is $10 so the farmer took the boy's money and the boy in turn took the dog in his arms and continued down the road. Finally arriving in Worcester, the boy found he was hungry.

It was in the Quinsigamond section and a number of boys were playing about. Edward asked the entire gang to escort him to the nearest bakeshop and be his guests at a treat. The boys responded with alacrity and for the next half hour the members of the gang gorged themselves on pie, with the Wakefield boy paying all the bills.

The careless manner in which he threw his money away aroused the suspicion of the neighborhood and the police were finally notified and a motorcycle officer rounded the boy up. Still clutching his precious dog, he told his story.

TROPHIES SENT TO AMERICA BY ROOSEVELTS

They Hope Soon to Get a Marco Polo Sheep, Writes Kermit

Chicago, July 16 (A.P.).—Initial trophies of birds and mammals obtained by the James Simpson-Roosevelt expedition to Central Asia for the Field Museum have been forwarded to the museum, said letters to Stanley Field, president of the museum, from Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Kermit Roosevelt, leaders of the expedition.

Written from Kashmir, the letters reported all members of the party well and gave plans for the expedition's advance into the Pamirs and the Tien Shan.

"I have laid plans for Indian rhinoceros, which I hope and believe will materialize," wrote Kermit. "When next I write I hope I shall have an Ovis Poli to report.

The Ovis Poli—Marco Polo sheep—known as the "trophy of trophies," is one of the expedition's main objectives.

Colonel Roosevelt's letter described the collecting done by George K. Cherrie and detailed plans for splitting the caravan to enable Cherrie to travel slowly and continue collecting, while the Roosevelts range more rapidly hunting larger animals. The party will be reformed at Asku and make for the Tien Shan together.

MAINE STATE POLICE HAVE TITLE, NO POWER

Portland, Me., July 16.—The discovery that the members of the Maine State Police are without authority of any kind, due to the failure of Governor Brewster to commission them, is expected to result in the Governor getting busy within the next few days.

The last legislature passed a bill repealing the old law which gave the State Police only authority to do road patrol work. The new bill also conferred full police powers on the troopers and this bill became effective on July 10.

Ex-Crown Prince Is Free to Enter German Politics

Berlin, July 16.—Former Crown Prince Wilhelm is free to enter politics, as far as any promise given the Prussian government is concerned.

This statement, overturning a belief generally held, was made today by the Prussian Minister of the Interior.

Answering the protest of Socialists against Wilhelm's visit to the agricultural meeting at Breslau, where he was given enthusiastic ovations, the minister said Wilhelm had never been pledged to keep out of politics.

MARY EATON INDIGNANT OVER WEDDING REPORT

New York, July 16 (A.P.)—Mary Eaton, youthful dancing star high up on Florenz Ziegfeld's payroll, is indignant over reports that she is to marry Georges Carpentier, French fistic idol. Such reports were published shortly after her departure for Paris five weeks ago. "Those reports are preposterous," she said yesterday in Ziegfeld's office. "In the first place Carpentier is married. I have met him several times in this country and abroad at dances and at parties. But marriage—that's another story. Love and marriage are far from my thoughts just now."

EX-MILLIONAIRE SCOTT MUST HANG TOMORROW

Chicago, July 16.—Russell T. Scott, one-time millionaire, must die on the gallows tomorrow for the murder of a drug store clerk in a holdup staged when, improverished, he sought to obtain a few dollars as a bandit.

Scott lost his long fight for life today when Governor Len Small of Illinois refused a last plea for commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment.

TECH GRAD HEAD OF STOUGHTON HIGH

Stoughton, July 16.—Roy F. Haggard of Watertown was selected by the school committee as principal of the Stoughton High School. He succeeds Principal R. E. Pomeroy, who was recently discharged by the board. He is a Tech graduate.

SHENANDOAH ON WAY TO NAVY MANEUVRES

Big Dirigible to Take Part in the War Game Off the Virginia Capes

Lakehurst, N. J., July 16.—Its great motors whirring in perfect rhythm, the dirigible Shenandoah took off here at 8 o'clock today for the Virginia Capes, there to join the Atlantic fleet for maneuvres.

It will be the first time that the navy has ever attempted to manœuvre in co-operation with a dirigible of the Zeppelin type of the Shenandoah.

Wind conditions were ideal when the big blimp got away. Scarcely a breeze was stirring, and there were low hanging clouds.

Within a few minutes after the Shenandoah soared aloft she disappeared into a cloud bank and was lost to view of those below.

The Shenandoah returned to Lakehurst just before midnight last night from the Rhode Island coast, where she had participated in gunnery maneuvres with the U. S. S. Texas.

HUGHES TO ADVOCATE ST. PAUL RATE RAISE

New York, July 16.—Receivers for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad announced that former Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes will represent them at the rate inquiry before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and to advocate a rate increase recently proposed by them.

OIL MAN ALLEGED TO OWE $500,000 TAXES

New York, July 16. (A. P.)—Eugene Constantin, oil man of Tulsa, Okla., gave bond of $10,000 to insure his appearance in Tulsa on October 1 to answer charges of defrauding the government by failure to pay income taxes totaling approximately $500,000.

Constantin plans to go abroad before returning to Oklahoma.

CUPID BUSY UNDER BIG GILT DOME

TAX DODGERS IN FAIRHAVEN ARRESTED

New Bedford, July 16.—Citizens of Fairhaven who have failed to pay their taxes in years gone by, are making their first acquaintance with the interior of the hoosegow. The threat of public officials to arrest tax delinquents is being carried out and a number of arrests have already been made.

Incidentally, the arrests have caused a great rush to the tax collector's office.

RAIL MERGER REPORT STIRS MAINE FINANCIERS

Portland, Me., July 16.—Business circles in Portland are all excited over reports eminating from brokerage houses in touch with New York concerning the pending changes in the management of the Maine Central and Bagor & Aroostock Railroads.

It is reported that investigators are in Maine preparing reports dealing with the feasibility of merging the two railroads.

There are also rumors that the two railroads will be taken over by the New York Central lines, along with the Boston & Maine.

PHONE GIRL TO BE BRIDE OF REP. KELLEY

Miss Marie Hannabury Will Be Bride of a Worcester Solon

The engagement of Miss Marie A. Hannabury, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hannabury, of No. 20 Jefferson avenue, Chelsea, and Representative Edward J. Kelley of Worcester, Democratic floor leader, is' anounced. The engagement follows a romance, which had its inception more than eighteen months ago, when Miss Hannabury, a comely brunette, who presides over the telephone branch exchange in the State Department of Civil Service, and Representative Kelley met while the latter was making an official visit to that office.

The wedding will take place in the Fall.

Miss Hannabury, who is one of the most popular attaches at the State House, graduated from St. Rose's Parochial School in 1916, and three years later, she was graduated from St. Rose's High School. Prior to coming to the State House, she was identified with the Main Telephone Exchange.

Representative Kelley is the son of Mrs. Mary Kelley, of No. 14 Gage street, Worcester. He was born at Holyoke, and graduated from Sacred Heart Academy High School and Bryant and Stratton Business College. For several years he was manager of the Sterling Hotel at Worcester, but more recently has been interested in the real estate and insurance business.

He is a member of the St. Anne's T. A. S.; Alhambra Council K. of C.; Fr. Mathew T. A. S.; president, United Division, A. O. H. of Worcester; vice-president, City Council Alumni.

He is a former member of the Worcester City Council and Board of Alderman. He was elected to the Legislature in 1923.

WILSON AND EDWARDS LAUD POLICE FUND

More Entertainments Planned for Benefit of Alexander Family

Two of Boston's most widely known men have added their words of praise to those of Cardinal O'Connell and Mayor James M. Curley in endorsing the Boston Evening American fund for the widow and six children of the late Police Inspector Benjamin Alexanler, killed in the Pickwick Club crash.

They are Major General Clarence R. Edwards, beloved leader of the 26th Division in France during the World War and Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson, under whom Inspector Alexander labored.

"I am glad to endorse the action of the Boston Evening American in starting the fund for this public servant," said General Edwards, in lauding the action of this newspaper. "The purpose is honest and will appeal to the public in looking for public servants who made the supreme sacrifice in the interest of their fellows."

Police Commissioner Wilson said "I desire to state that after an investigation by his commanding officer and from the reports submitted to me as a result of such investigation it appears that Inspector Alexander was in the performance of his duty at the time he met his death. He leaves a widow and six children. These children will have to be fed, clothed and educated and the burden of this necessarily falls on the widowed mother. I therefore endorse the plan of your newspaper in raising a fund which will materially assist her in carrying out the duties of caring for her family."

One of the features in connection with the fund, that appeals to the average man and woman, is the conservative manner in which it is to be administered. With such men as Walter Bucklin, president of the National Shawmut Bank, and James Jackson, former State Treasurer, on the board of trustees, the interest of the widow and six children will be carefully conserved and safeguarded. These high-minded men will give their best effort to that end.

Entertainments of various kinds are being arranged to swell the fund, including a bridge party at the home of Mrs. C. K. Helpern at Beach avenue and Adams street, Waveland, Nantasket, next Monday afternoon. There will be fifty tables. It is estimated that two hundred or more persons will be present. Prizes for each table have been donated by the Touraine Glove Company of Boston. The committee in charge of the whist includes Mrs. H. Rambach, Mrs. Charles Sheffren, Mrs. Philip Alexander, Mrs. A. Cibel and Mrs. Gertrude Marks.

The plant of the Stanley Motor Carriage Company, located on the south bank of the Charles River on the Watertown-Newton line has been purchased by the firm of Bachrach, Inc., and the buildings will be used as the executive offices and finishing studio for the photographic firm.

The newly acquired buildings cover three acres of ground and contain 110,000 feet of floor space, and when completed the studio will be the largest and most complete in the world. The business of Bachrach, Inc., was founded in 1868 by David Bachrach, father of the present president of the company, Louis Fabian Bachrach. The company now operates studios in all the principal cities east of the Mississippi River.

"HOT DOG" LICENSES WILL BOOST PRICES

Hot dogs at stands along North Shore boulevards, and at the many resorts in that district, bid fair to go to higher prices; and potato chips, peanuts, and all other edibles, will probably follow suit.

State inspectors have been bringing into play an old law imposing a license fee on such places as have opened their doors since the annual round of assessors. The license required is a transient vendor's costing $25. In addition, all coming under its provisions must also post $500 bonds, costing additional $10 fees to be paid a bonding company.

TRAIN SERVICE CUT DOWN IN BERKSHIRES

B. & M. Announces Speedup As Result of Falling Off of Traffic

A readjustment of passenger trains between Troy and Boston, by which a faster service will be provided between North Adams, Greenfield, Gardner, Fitchburg and Boston, in announced by the Boston and Maine Railroad, effective July 20.

This improvementin service is being made, it is explained, in connection with economies in train movements on the Fitchburg-Berkshire Division, made necessary by continuing losses in passenger revenues. A falling off of 14,267 riders, or 8.5 per cent. of the number of passengers entering or leaving Boston over this line, was shown by the figures for June, compared with the same mnoth last year. This was the largest proportional loss on any division entering Boston, it was announced.

By the changes, trains 52 and 54, the former from North Adams, and latter from Troy, which now arrive at Boston at 12:20 and 2:30 p. m., respectively, weekdays, will be speeded up to arrive at 11:43 a. m. and 2:10 p. m. This will be done by elimination of local stops at stations from which the patronage has been light. Train 56, from Troy, now arriving at Boston at 3:00 p. m. weekdays, will be discontinued.

To serve stations between Fitchburg and Boston, a new train will leave Fitchburg weekdays at 1:15 p. m., stopping locally, and arriving in Boston at 3:00 p. m.

Westbound, train 53, leaving Boston at 5:25 a. m. weekdays, will be discontinued beyond Fitchburg, as a result of the light travel west of that city. Thrain 57, leaving Boston at 10:15 a. m. weekdays will be operated one to three minutes earlier between West Deerfield and North Adams inclusive.

Foiled by Noise

Leo Ganner, alias Russo, is now at Charles Street Jail, because he made just a trifle too much noise when he attempted to pound his way to freedom while being transported in the Chelsea police van. Chauffeur Sherman Smalley heard the racket and put a damper on Ganner's ambitions.

ESCAPE HALTED BY TOO MUCH POUNDING

Leo Ganner, alias Russo, charged with breaking and entering and larceny, in Revere, is in the Charles street jail principally because he made too much noise while trying to escape from the Chelsea police van.

Ganner, said to be wanted in a number of towns, would have escaped from the van while being taken from Chelsea Court to the jail save for the fact that the brass grill covering one of the windows in the police patrol was diffioult to remove.

Chauffeur Sherman Smalley heard the glass break shortly after leaving the Chelsea station. Later he heard a heavy pounding inside the auto van and stopping the machine, unlocked the door and found that Ganner had smashed one of the small windows in the car and had almost succeeded in knocking off some brass grill work outside the window.

Because he is undersized it is believed that he was planning to squeeze through the window. A man of ordinary size could not get through the window.

SWIFT-FOOTED RUM RUNNER IS JAILED

Portland, Me., July 16.—A total jail sentence of 11 months and a total fine of $1100 were imposed on Louis Napolitano, Portland boxer, in municipal court, after he was found guilty of transportation of a gallon can of alcohol, on foot, last week. The State charged that he is the man who twice escaped from pursuing deputy sheriffs by sheer fleetness of foot, dropping a wet burden each time.

Napolitano entered an appeal and gave $2000 bail for appearance in September.

NEW HAVEN DELAYS COMMUTATION RATE BOOST

New York, July 16.—Announcement was made from the New Haven Railroad offices that the 40 per cent. increase in cost of commutation tickets and fifty-strip tickets set for July 1, and then suspended until July 15, will be again suspended until July 31.

The increase aroused a protest from the commuters and the various municipal governments in Westchester and Connecticut. The protests were put before the Public Service Commission by the Westchester commuters, while the Connecticut objectors appealed to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

TWO FACE CHARGES OF STEALING AUTOS

Inspectors Maguire, Blake and Boucher of police headquarters arrested on warrants charging larceny of automobiles, Charles Jacobs, 40 years old, of No. 28 Lombard court, Malden, and Edward F. Kennedy, 19 years old, of No. 191 West Ninth street, South Boston. Jacobs is alleged to have stolen the car of Edwin Farnell of No. 59 West Central street, Natick, on April 3, 1925. Kennedy is charged with stealing an automobile owned by Tichnor & Co., No. 1 University road, Cambridge.

BOSTON FIRE LEADER LAUNCHES NEW BOAT

Monponsett, July 16.—Deputy Chief Walter M. McLean of the Boston fire department, held a launching for his new 30-foot power boat on Lake Monponsett. Mrs. McLean entertained a large party of guests, and Miss Margaret McLean, their daughter, christened the boat the Finn McCool, by throwing a spray of roses over the bow.

FORMER PASTOR AGAIN FLEES FOR LOVE

Wife Believes He Has Departed for Mexico With Her Sister-in-Law

South Bend, Ind., July 16 (A.P.).—Wilson Culp, former Ohio pastor, still is a most ardent lover.

Again the pastor, who has twice deserted his wife and nine children, only to be forgiven each time, has left his family and is believed by his wife to have departed with Mrs. Dorothy Culp, a sister-in-law of Napanee, Ind., who disappeared at the same time.

It is the second time they have deserted their households in favor of each other. Last Spring they cast their lot together, only to break up when Mrs. Wilson Culp got a warrant charging non-support.

When the latter refused to prosecute each returned to their homes, asking forgiveness. Their requests were granted and each promised not to err again. However, they are believed to have broken their promise and Mrs. Wilson Culp believes they have fled to Mexico.

On a previous occasion, when Mr. Culp was in charge of a church in Ohio, he is said to have run off with a choir singer, only to be returned an dsentenced to an Ohio workhouse on a charge of non-support. A similar charge is now pending as the result of a warrant just obtained by Mrs. Wilson Culp.

MEDICAL DEAN IS MOURNED AT DARTMOUTH

Dr. Gile in Failing Health for Past Few Months; Born in Pembroke, N. H.

Hanover, N. H., July 16.—Dartmouth College is in mourning over the passing of Dr. John Martin Gile, dean of the college school of medicine and life trustee of the institution.

A graduate of Dartmouth, Dr. Gile for the past twenty-nine years was connected with the activities of the college. For some months Dr. Gile's health had been failing and an attack of angina pectoris proved too much for his weakened system.

Funeral services will be held at his home Saturday at 2 P. M.

Dr. Gile was born in Pembroke, N. H., March 8, 1864. He prepared for Dartmouth at Pembroke Academy and received his bachelor's degree in 1887 and his M. D. at Dartmouth medical school in 1891.

In 1910, Dr. Gile served as chairman of the Republican State convention and in the following two years was a member of the Governor's council. In 1917-18 he held a commission as lieutenant in the medical reserve corps and served as medical aide to the Governor.

On June 8, 1896, he married Vesta Fowler, who survives with their four children, Dr. John F., Archie B., Madeline and Dorothy, all of Hanover.

HUSBAND FAKED WEDDING, WIFE CHARGES

Gave Him $800 to Buy a Barber Shop, Then He Wanted to Wed Another, She Says

The confidence of a widow in getting a husband was painfully misplaced in the case of Mrs. Emanuelo Tuffo, aged 28, of No. 43 Bridge street, Hyde Park, who since June 8 has been living with Joseph Ebbi, aged 22, under the blissful but erroneous impression that she was Mrs. Ebbi.

So thoroughly did she trust her "husband" that she turned over $800 to him.

The denoument came, however and Ebbi is in Municipal Court today on several charges growing out of the affair.

The couple obtained a marriage license in proper form. The widow was assured getting the license was all the marriage ceremony that was required. She turned over $800 to her husband to buy a barber shop, which he did. He sold the shop a month later.

The unmasking came when the husband demanded the return of the marriage license informing the widow at the same time that he wanted to marry another. The widow called the police.

HEROIC CARMAN DIES OF CRASH INJURIES

Somersworth, N. H., July 16.—Owen A. Grady, motorman on the Dover-Somersworth & Rochester Street Railway for more than 15 years, died from injuries sustained on July 5. Various passengers on the car maintain Mr. Grady's heroic work prevented a more serious accident.

He was born in Ireland but most of his life has been spent here. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and Hibernians. He is survived by his widow and three small children.

RESIGNS MAINE POST AFTER TERM EXPIRES

Augusta, Me., July 16.—State Bank Commissioner Fred M. Lawrence has tendered his resignation to Governor Brewster to take effect on July 20. Although his term expired on May 6, he has been continuing in office until a successor shall have been named. Several weeks ago Governor Brewster nominated John G. Smith of Saco as bank commissioner, but the council at subsequent meetings refused to confirm the nomination.

HUB TEMPLARS TAKE BEANS TO SEATTLE

Will Distribute "Boston Baked" at Grand Conclave of Order

Out on the Pacific Coast 25,000 people have a treat in store for them. They are the folks to whom the Boston Knights Templars will distribute the 25,000 cans of real Boston home-baked beans they are carrying westward with them on a special train.

The Templars are members of Joseph Warren Commandery No. 25 and they are en route to the grand conclave at Seattle.

The party of 140, including relatives and friends, went from the South Station on a special train of ten cars. The trip to Seattle will be made by way of southern California and the Pacific Coast. Following the encampment, July 27 to 29, the return journey will be made by way of the Canadian Rockies.

Heading the pilgrimage are Henry S. Wolkins, commander; Frank H. Jenkins, generalissimo, and Alfred W. Godfrey, captain-general of the commandery. The triennial committee consists also of Harry E. Stevens and Louis A. Warren. Walter H. Woods, a past commander, is managing the tour itself.

More than 80 women are accompanying the commandery to the 36th triennial conclave.

SLAYER WILL FIGHT HIS DEATH SENTENCE

Concord, N. H., July 16.—Through his attorneys George L. Hause of this city, convicted of the murder of Moses Goldberg, a merchant, has filed an appeal with the supreme court taking exceptions to court rulings during the trial.

He was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury in Merrimack County Superior Court and upon recommendation of the jury was sentenced by Chief Justice Branch to be hanged Nov. 17, 1923. The appeal is expected to be heard in September.

POSTOFFICE CLERK HELD IN $1,000 FOR LARCENY

Charles Kelly, for eleven years a postal employe and now a clerk in the Roxbury station, was arrested by Poseoffice Inspector James E. Sullivan on the charge of embezzling a letter from the mails. The letter, it is alleged, contained a small sum of money addressed to a Boston furniture house. Kelly was held by U. S. Commissioner Jenney for the Federal Grand Jury in $1,000.

DEATH-DIVE COUNTESS LEFT $50,000 ESTATE

New York, July 16—Temporary administrators of the estate of Baroness Helen Zur Huhlen, formerly of Texas, who died as a result of a fall from a window of her apartment in the RitzCarlton Hotel on July 8, were appointed by Surrogate O'Brien on application of her mother, Mrs. Estelle Carruthers of New York. The estate, in this country, is valued at $50,000.

SHOT CRIPPLES LEG OF CHECK SUSPECT

Bridgeport, Ct., July 16.—Seymour Wolff, twenty-eight years old, of Buffalo, N. Y., who was shot while attempting to escape from the officer who arrested him on charges of passing bad checks, has lost the use of his left leg as a result of the wound, according to reports from the hospital.

Wolff is wanted in Schenectady, Syracuse, N. Y., and Trenton, N. J., on similar charges.

FIRST COTTON BALE EARLIEST IN 25 YEARS

New York, July 16.—The first bale of new cotton to reach New York this season was received by the cotton brokerage firm of Bond, McEnany & Co., from Savanah, Ga. It will be auctioned off on the floor of the cotton exchange.

The bale was produced by J. C. Getzer of Webster, Fla., being shipped here by Cooper & Griffin of Savannah. Its receipt was earlier than any in 25 years.

PLAN TO SAVE FEES FOR MOVIE EXTRAS

Hollywood, Calif., July 16.—Directors of the Association of Motion Picture Producers have decided to open a free casting bureau to enable motion picture extras and day employes to escape the fee of 10 per cent. of the daily wage charged by independent bureau and employment agencies. The industry makes more than 200,000 placements of casual labor annually.

MAINE PLANT TO MAKE PULP PAPER MACHINES

Bath, Me., July 16—The Watson Frye Company, Inc., machinery manufacturers, has been sold to a group of New York capitalists. The plant will be enlarged and will manufacture pulp and paper machinery, it is understood. Harry E. Tidemarsh, general manager of the Union Pulp and Paper Works at Bangor, will become resident manager.

NEW FEATURES FOR AMERICAN OUTINGS

Four new features are announced today for the mothers' and children's outings of the Boston Evening American at Nantasket Beach.

The first of these features is entertainment de luxe aboard the two big steamers that General Manager Lane and Assistant General Manager Griffin of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company have lent for the outings. The full story about this feature will be told in a day or two.

The next two features are a double-barreled attraction which Managers David and Joseph Stone of Paragon Park have added to their amusement program for the mothers and children.

Besides opening two of the park amusements free to the excursionists and reducing the price of all the rest to five cents, the Paragon Park management has arranged:

A band concert lasting two hours and a half.

An outdoor show.

The fourth feature makes sea-baths possible for all. Manager H. Sarkin of the Sagamore Baths came foowara today with the announcement that all mothers and tots who cannot bring their own suits can get Sagamore suits at a low, nominal price. For those who bring their own suits, remember, the use of the Sagamore lockers is absolutely free.

Coupons exchangeable for tickets to the first outing, on Tuesday, July 21, are appearing daily in the Boston Evening American. Coupons must be exchanged for tickets on Saturday morning, 8 to 12 o'clock, at No. 288 Devonshire street.

This week's coupons are for the first outing only. Three coupons and 15 cents will be accepted for a ticket.

Do not bring coupons to the Boston Evening American main office. Outing headquarters is around the corner.

Remember, mothers and children, every person requires a ticket. The capacity of each boat is limited to 1,500, making a limit of 3,000 persons, babies included.

for La Follette, a sincere, earnest and useful man, exercising his constitutional right to run for President.

Second, radicalism did not get its death blow last November, even if you call La Follette "radicalism." He is more influential now in his grave than he was last November.

Third, there is to come plenty more "radicalism," which means people thinking for themselves. And there will be more of it to come ten thousand years hence, and later.

RADICALISM, LIKE conservatism, is of two kinds, good and bad, constructive and destructive. American business men and others should plan now for a peaceful future, one in which radicals and conservatives may live together, each getting that to which he is entitled, namely, what his ability and industry produce.

IF THE INTELLIGENCE of the nation would plan for the future of a nation as a man plans for his own family, there need be no troubles ahead.

The able man says: "I want my children to be busy, useful and happy."

If there were an organized intelligence in this country planning earnestly for the future welfare of all Americans, as the rich man plans (nearly always unsuccessfully) for the happiness of his own family, or as the great Mitsui family of Japan plans for the happiness of its own membership, the United States might escape a majority of the troubles and problems that otherwise it must face in future, as Europe faces them now.

THE FIRST of problems is to make work attractive. To begin, do for Americans what the French Revolution did for Frenchmen, and one of the kings of Sweden did for the Swedes—make them owners of the land and thus gave them a stake in government stability.

Safeguard their savings, protect them from sharks that are allowed to steal from them hundreds of millions a year—cheap sharks of the lottery, the gambling ring, the oil stock, expensive sharks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford type.

BUT FIRST of all, MAKE WORK ITSELF ATTRACTIVE.

That CAN be done, first, by changing conditions under which men work—long hours, the uncertainty of employment, meagerness of wages.

And second, by making workers take an actual interest in their work by giving them a generous share of what they earn.

YOU HAVE no trouble among men fishing, hunting, snowshoeing, tobogganing or dancing—THEY LIKE IT.

The man that owns his own bootblack or news stand and gets the profits for HIMSELF works long hours, good weather or bad, and does not complain, HE LIKES IT. He's in business for himself.

WHEN BUSINESS intelligence succeeds in making INDUSTRY ATTRACTIVE, when it can truly be said that men LIKE THEIR WORK, the problems of industry will be solved, and there will still be plenty of money and luxury left for the man that wants more than his share.

THE HIGHER the earnings of the average man, the greater the profit of the EXCEPTIONAL man. All that the big man can ever get is his percentage of what the little men earn. The more little men earn the more big men will get.

Let him who doubts it start a business in China, where you can hire men for fifteen cents and women for ten cents a day.

WHAT GENIUS will find a way to MAKE INDUSTRY ATTRACTIVE, to organize the country's manufacturers and other work on a basis that will make 100 per cent. of the workers LIKE THEIR WORK, whereas now 99 per cent. of those that work for a salary hate their work and look forward eagerly to the day of freedom in idleness?

The man able to solve THAT problem will do a work as great as Lincoln. He will free millions of INDUSTRIAL slaves, changing hateful slavery into attractive occupation.

The dough must be silky!

Rule #1 in baking this new kind of Soda Cracker

WEDDING cake and the bride's biscuit are often far, far apart, but these differences simply prove that dough is the mother of both success and failure.

Dough is the raw material of a great art—baking. It is a study; for dough has a distinct structure. It may be tough, tender, short, brittle, shear or silken.

But for this New Sunshine Soda Cracker it must be silken, for this is the way to secure just the right puff—the true "bite," and most of all, the fullest flavor—in baking.

Good cooks will endorse the Full Grain Process

If baking isn't an art, fallen cakes and heavenly pie crust couldn't come from the same cook. Uniformity is the key to all successful baking. You get the process right, and then hold it, no matter what the conditions are. The "how" of this is the real difficulty.

In baking the new Sunshine Soda Cracker it means:

Special temperatures strictly held, no matter what the weather;

A brand new way of working the dough so that it can't possibly toughen;

Most careful watchfulness at the ovens;

Just the right percentage of gluten in the wheat.

The outcome of this process is a new kind of soda cracker, full-flavored, rich, of fine texture and good looks.

Sold only in the bright red package

Note the shape. 3 good reasons for the notched sides (patented):
1. Splits in two for sandwiches.
2. Less crumbling.
3. In baking, the notches form many vent-holes in the sheet of crackers: Result—more thorough baking and better flavor.

BOYS PEDAL TO NEW YORK AND BACK AGAIN

Charlestown Youths All Smiles as They Reach Home After Long Trip

Anyone who cares for mathematics can figure out just how many times Howard Erwin and Travis Goodwin, two Charlestown boys, turned the wheels of their bicycles between here and New York and back. Young friends of the pair had told them they couldn't make the trip in a month.

Howard, who is 15 years old and lives at No. 7 Foster Court, and Travis, 17 years old, of No. 85 Pearl street, left Charlestown at 7 A. M. last Saturday on their bicycles, and arrived in New York at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

On the return trip the boys said they were stopped by no fewer than a dozen policemen who were searching for the slayer of a New York taxi driver. The young cyclists arrived home 135 hours after their departure.

A blowout of one of the tires of Erwin's bicycle delayed the expedition, but the gift of a new tire soon saw them on their way.

At night the boys camped in the open, wrapped in blankets they carried, and their meals for the most part consisted of canned goods, also transported on the bicycles.

BOY DROWNED IN LAKE AS CANOE OVERTURNS

Stowe, July 16.—George Hendrickson, sixteen years old, of No. 33 Garfield street, Maynard, was drowned in Lake Boone here, when a canoe, in which he was paddling with a companion, Wiano Servia, and of Maynard, overturned. Servia was saved through the efforts of a girl bather.

KID CYCLISTS ALL SMILES AFTER TRIP

Distance doesn't mean much to Howard Erwin (left), fifteen, and Travis Goodrow, seventeen, who are home after having pedaled all the way to New York and back again. The boys started from their Charlestown home last Saturday at 7 a. m. and arrived at the Big City at 3 a. m. Monday. Their return trip was made in a more leisurely manner.

CONCORD MAY BAR ANIMALS FROM CITY

Concord, N. H., July 16.—Roosters that start crowing before daylight because their thrifty owners use electric lights in the hen houses to stimulate egg production, may result in all poultry and live-stock being driven from the fire limits of the city.

An ordinance is now before a committee of the alderman providing for the elimination of all cows, chickens, pigs, ducks, etc., from the city proper, that Concord people may enjoy their early morning rest.

30-FOOT POLE FALLS ON BOY, BREAKS LEG

Springfield, July 16. — Robert Wade, eight years old, of West Springfield, narrowly escaped death while playing, when a thirty-foot pole was pulled over on him by the Russel Auto Service truck.

The truck caught in a clothes line attached to the pole. Fortunately, the pole struck the boy a glancing blow. One of the lad's legs was fractured.

VACATION RESORTS AND TRAVEL

News and Advertisements

THE desire to travel—so strong in most of us—is a heritage of those by-gone ages when primitive man roamed at will, or as necessity dictated.

The lure of distant places, of strange scenes, so potent in the spread of civilization, still exerts a helpful influence, broadens our viewpoints and, ofttimes, by upsetting our smug complacency with things as they are, gives to life a fuller, richer meaning.

Where to go—what to see, how to get there—these and a hundred interesting facts are given in the Vacation Resorts and Travel News and Advertisements published in Today's paper. You'll find it worth your while to

HUB UP FRONT IN ELKS' BIG PARADE TODAY

Nicholson Heads New England Turnout at Portland, Ore., Meet

Portland, Ore., June 16.—Past Grand Exalted Ruler James R. Nicholson will head the New England delegation of Elks in the big parade today, which will be the chief feature of the sixty-first session of the grand lodge here.

District Deputy Timothy E. McCarthy will be in command of the Massachusetts delegation and Deputies Lester C. Ayer and R. L. Ervin are to command the main group. Deputy Frank Shea heads the Vermont delegates and Dr. T. F. O'Laughlin of Rockville, Ct., is at the head of the Nutmeg contingent.

The City of Roses has opened its heart to the New England delegations. Receptions, dinners and entertainment of all kinds are always awaiting the eastern brothers at the hand of the coast city lodge.

Michael J. Melledy, chairman of the Boston committee, is being heartily congratulated by the Boston contingent for the successful carrying out of various features of the trip. Dennis J. McGillicuddy is assistant chairman of the Boston committee.

The New England delegation is rehearsing special songs for the parade tomorrow.

We're come from New England
 To Portland, Oregon.
We're hot, dry and thirsty,
But our voices are strong.
The spirit of Elkdom's leading us on.
We are full of pep and we keep in step
 On to Portland, Oregon.

The Boston song, composed by Mrs. George A. Stuart and Miss Agnes Burke, follows:

Boston, Boston, we're all the way from Boston,
To join the Elks' convention out in Portland, Oregon.
We've brought a lot of chickens to help us raise the dickens,
And dance the light fantastic,
To your syncopated band.
Boston, Boston, every one in Boston sends a lot of love and kisses, too.
Hello Bill! We're going strong,
We want to take you all along
When we go back to Boston Town.

GORDON THEATRES TO CHANGE HANDS SUNDAY

The final step in the taking over of the Gordon Theatres in Boston and suburbs by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, will be taken on Sunday, when W. P. Gray of Lewiston, Me., will assume general managership of a total of approximately 80 Famous Players theatres in New England.

This group includes the 33 Gordon theatres that have been transferred to the Lasky interests, involving a sum aggregating $9,000,000. Practically the same office personnel that was employed by Gordon is still in force at the company's big office at No. 333 Washington street.

FALLING ELM BREAKS BEVERLY MAN'S LEG

Beverly, July 16—An old elm tree on Colon street, near the new high school, upon which city employes had been working in their preparations to cut it down, fell without warning on two men passing beneath it. Willis F. Quinvy, 26 years old of No. 21 Whitney avenue, Beverly, was buried beneath the branches, which just missed his companion, Dwight Davenport.

Quinvy, who was returning from work at the United Shoe Machinery plant, suffered a fracture of the left leg, which was later set at the Beverly Hospital.

10-DAY TRIP TO HAVANA RUN BY WARD LINE

A special ten-day Summer tour to Havana is announced by the Ward Line at the all expense rate of $140 and up. This gives six days at sea and four days ashore in this gay and fascinating foreign capital. Each day is crammed full of interest, relaxation and enjoyment on this ideal Summer trip. If desired the trip can be extended to 17 days, making a total cost of $200, which includes accommodation at an excellent hotel on shore.

The Ward Line also offers a trip to Mexico City by way of Vera Cruz at $185 and up.

SLAIN CHATHAM MAN BURIED; WIFE COLLAPSES

Chatham, July 16.—Funeral services are being held here today for Ziba C. Nickerson, young Chatham shipping clerk, who was shot through the heart while returning from Chicago with a new automobile for his wife's birthday.

The wife, Mrs. Lillian L. Nickerson, who yesterday celebrated her twenty-ninth birthday, is in a state of collapse.

FITCHBURG WANTS TO KEEP FAVORITE TRAIN

Fitchburg, July 16.—The Fitchburg Chamber of Commerce entered a strong protest with the Boston & Maine railroad against the proposed removal of train 53, which leaves here at 7:37 a. m. for Troy, N. Y., this train having been a favorite with business men here for more than thirty years. Greenfield and Gardner are also protesting. The next Troy train leaves here at 10:43 a. m.

HUB OARSMEN REACH CAPE COD CANAL

Selfridge and Richards to Continue New York Wherry Trip Today

Buzzards Bay, July 16.—The second leg of their perilous journey from Boston to New York in a frail wherry completed, George S. Selfridge, Boston lawyer, and Dr. Thomas K. Richards, put off early today on the third leg that will take them across the Bay.

From Plymouth to Sandwich the oarsmen declared it was "some pull against the tides in a choppy sea. The pair had planned to spend last night at Wing's Neck, but the pull through the canal was harder than was expected.

Instead of hugging the shore line, the two oarsmen made a direct route from Plymouth to Sandwich at the eastern end of the canal. Just inside the canal breakwater, which they reached at 2:40, they pulled their little craft ashore and lay down for a rest beside it. Less than three hours later they were heading through the canal.

NOVA SCOTIA PREMIER RESIGNS ON SICK BED

Halifax, N. S., July 16 (A.P.)—E. H. Armstrong, premier of Nova Scotia, resigned and E. N. Rhodes, who led the conservative party to a victory of 40 seats to 3 in the general elections of June 25, was called to form a new government.

No announcement as to the result of Mr. Rhodes' efforts to form a new government has yet been made.

Angry Wife's Cries Summon Fire Department

Neighbors of John Donovan at No. 279 Highland street, Roxbury, heard John's wife, Mary, scream "Help! police! fire!" during the course of a wordy dispute between them. They heard the last appeal more distinctly than the others and acted on it promptly and turned in an alarm from the nearest box.

The alarm brought all three, the firemen went back disgusted, the police furnished the help, and Mary and John were locked up, charged with being drunk.

MISSING LYNN GIRL HAS ODD AMBITION

Ran Away From Home Last Saturday Because She Wanted to Go to Work

The ambition of the human race to escape work is so general that Boston police are puzzled as they search for fourteen-year-old Jennie Graves Leighton, daughter of Alvin T. Leighton of No. 192 Lewis street, Lynn.

The girl was so ambitious to work that she ran away from home last Saturday and nothing has since been seen of her.

The girl was sent on an errand by her mother early Saturday morning but smuggled a suitcase containing her clothes through a window and disappeared. She was reported as seen in an employment agency but efforts of the parents to question the office were futile.

POLICE BELIEVE IN AMERICAN'S INSURANCE

Chief McBride of Cambridge and Aides Take Out Popular Policies

"The insurance service offered by the Boston Evening American is without a doubt the greatest piece of journalism ever conducted by any newspaper for people in moderate circumstances who otherwise would not be able to have such protection."

That is what Chief of Police John J. McBride of Cambridge thinks about the Boston Evening American's $7,500 Travel-Accident insurance police.

Chief McBride is a veteran of thirty-eight years' service on the Cambridge police force.

While he has been watching Cambridge grow from a small city to an important industrial community of approximately 125,000 population, he has been gathering wisdom and among other things has come to believe firmly in insurance. He is insured for $4,500 in other companies but he became a holder of one of the Boston Evening American policies.

"I heartily endorse this insurance movement of the Evening American," said Chief McBride. "I urge everybody to avail themselves of this chance of a lifetime to secure a policy."

Thomas F. Burke, inspector of licenses in the Cambridge police department, and Charles P. Donelan, chief clerk for Chief McBride, are also insured in the Boston Evening American plan. They believe that the increase of automobile accidents make it imperative for a man to hold accident insurance, while the Boston Evening American's insurance opportunity makes it possible for every man to do so, regardless of his financial status.

TWO AUTOISTS FREED IN FATAL ACCIDENTS

H. Sinclair Wetsler of No. 164 Strathmore road, Brighton, and Mrs. Elva Sieler of No. 315 Eastbourne road, Newton, were in the Brighton Municipal Court, charged with manslaughter, and both found no guilty.

Wetsler was the operator of an automobile which struck Cecil Durham of No. 290 Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay, causing his death at Commonwealth and Summit avenues, Brighton, June 11. Mrs. Sieler, while operating an automobile July 8, at Washington and Lake streets, Brighton, struck Peter J. McCarthy of No. 11 Turner street, Brighton, causing his death.

466,000 IN GERMANY VOTE FOR PROHIBITION

Berlin, July 16.—There were 466,000 votes for prohibition, the result of a post card campaign, placed on the table in front of the speaker's stand of the Reichstag by promoters of local option, who are seeking the enactment of a law which it is hoped will eventually place Germany in the dry column.

STATE TAX ASSESSORS GATHER AT HOLYOKE

Holyoke, July 16.—The Massachusetts State Association of Assessors, numbering nearly 200, held its annual mid-Summer outing at Mt. Tom. The speakers were Henry F. Long, State commissioner of taxation, and Albert B. Fales, local district taxation superintendent. G. E. Mansfield, Jr., of Springfield, president, presided.

7 FLIERS WILL COMPETE FOR HEARST PRIZES

California National Guardsmen to Take to Air at Los Angeles Tomorrow

Los Angeles, Calif., July 16.—Seven planes will fly northward from this city early tomorrow morning in a contest over a course covering a total of 1,250 miles for $1,000 in prizes offered by William Randolph Hearst, through the Los Angeles and the San Francisco Examiners.

The trip is to be from Los Angeles to San Francisco via thet San Joaquin valley with stops at Bakersfield, Fresno, Modesto, Sacramento and San Francisco both going and coming; and will cover a period of three days.

The fliers will arrive in San Francisco, landing at Crissy field, the Army airport, tomorrow afternoon. They will remain overnight in San Francisco and leave that city at 1 o'clock Saturday for Sacramento, the capital of the State, where they also will remain over night. Early Sunday morning they will again be on the wing for the last leg of the journey, stopping at Modesto, Fresno and Bakersfield, arriving here at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

HOOD CO. OUTING IS ATTENDED BY 1,000

More than 1,000 people attended the twenty-second annual outing of the H. P. Hood & Sons' Mutual Benefit Association at Norumbega Park, Auburndale.

The married men deefated the single men, 3 to 1, in a seven-inning ball game, and Joseph Readom, salesman of the Dorchester branch, captured the honors in the running races. Thelma Ailson won the girl's 50-yard dash. Mrs. M. Carlson illustrated how to light a match in a gale of wind by winning the candle race.

AUTO BREAKS SKULL OF DORCHESTER GIRL

While going to the store for her mother, Evelyn V. Campbell, seven years old, of No. 73 Freeport street, Dorchester, was knocked down by an automobile, sustaining a fracture of the skull. She is at the City Hospital and her name is on the danger list.

BIGGEST APARTMENTS ARE OPENED INFORMALLY

Alden Park Manor, Longwood avenue and Chapel street, Brookline, the largest apartment-hotel in New England, was informally opened with a reception to the manager, Albert Baine Caldwell, attended by several hundred guests, including members of the New England Hotel Men's Association.

There was dancing in the ballroom of the Manor and refreshments were served at a buffet lunch. Although the house is partly occupied the grand opening of the house will not be held until September.

LOAD OF HAY ON FIRE ON COMMONWEALTH AVE.

Residents along Commonwealth avenue near Chestnut Hill avenue, Brighton, were treated to considerable excitement when a two-horse hayrick loaded down with hay, took fire and the fire department was called to put out the blaze. The hayrick, owned by John F. Sullivan of No. 20 Lake street, Brighton, and driven by John Harper, was proceeding along Commonwealth avenue when, it is alleged, two small boys ran up behind and placed a match in the hay.

SECOND SECTION

SLEUTH SHARES HONORS WITH COOLIDGE

Sec. Davis Called by Coolidge to Halt Coal Strike

A Thrilling Novel of Love and Adventure, Mystery and Intrigue That Every-One Will Want to Read

SALLY MEREDITH, nervy niece of

M. FREDERICK LASALLE, war gas inventor, is intrusted with the secret of opening the red lacquer case containing the formula sought by spies of rival governments. That night the red lacquer case is stolen and Lasalle mysteriously disappears. The case is so constructed that the formula is destroyed by one not in the secret.

MAJOR BILL ARMITAGE, seven years previously the sweetheart of Sally, appears in search of Lasalle. Unexpected meeting renews acquaintance, but Sally is coy and Bill blunders. At Smugglers' Leap Bill and Sally find Lasalle's fountain pen, mute evidence which adds to the fears of Bill. Sally clings to hope.

DETECTIVE WILLIAMS enters the mystery and takes up the trail of the stolen case.

ETTA SHAW, once friend of Sally, lures the girl to London. She is made a prisoner by Lazare, the Goggled Terror. Lazare attempts to terrorize Sally, but fails. Sally's jailers learn from spies that Bill is coming to search Etta's house, the prison. Etta pretends to let Sally escape so that they may recapture her when Bill goes.

Read on and enjoy this wonderful story of love and mystery.

CHAPTER XVIII

"THIS must be the place, sir. Two miles out, and a high wall running all along by the road—"

Major Armitage brought the car to a standstill and swung round, his hand still on the steering wheel

"Well, what's the procedure?" he asked

"Ask if the lady is at home as if you were paying a friendly call, I should say, sir."

"No, thanks, Williams. It's a beastly job, but for the Lord's sake don't make it any worse than it is. This is an official visit, and you do the talking."

"Very good, sir—it's all in the day's work as far as I'm concerned."

They got out, tried the door in the wall, and found it unlocked whereat the inspector frowned.

"Either there's nothing in it, or they're expecting us," he said, as they passed in.

There were lights in the front of the house. One room on the ground floor showed a glow behind curtains. From a bedroom above it a broad ray of warm light streamed out upon the dusk

Bill pressed the bell, but the inspector lifted up his hand, and beat a heavy tattoo with the knocker. The sound died away, and a momentary silence was broken by the tapping of high-heeled shoes upon a stone or brick floor. An instant later the unbolted door was opened by a woman in the grey alpaca and white linen of a nurse—rather hard faced but very correct with dark enquiring eyes. Correct—yes that was the word—impassive too, and foreign certainly.

Bill summed up Nadine in these terms whilst the inspector was asking for Miss Shaw, and they were being shown upstairs as far as a half landing which displayed two doors. Nadine opened the one upon the right switching on the light as she did so and they were left in a primly old fashioned drawing-room.

When the door opened Miss Etta Shaw came in. She had washed her face as Lazare had bidden her. She had also composed herself to the best of her ability, but she was obviously in some agitation as she came forward and enquired:

"Did you wish to see me?"

"If you are Miss Etta Shaw," said the inspector. Bill merely bowed.

"I am Miss Etta Shaw."

"Then I have a few questions to ask you, if you will be so good as to answer them." The inspector here dived into his pocket and produced a notebook from which, having cleared his throat, he proceeded to read.

"When, if I may ask, did you last see Miss Sally Meredith?"

Etta flushed scarlet and swung round on Bill. "Sally?" You're Major Armitage, aren't you? Isn't Sally at Chark? Don't tell me there's anything wrong"

"One minute, Miss Shaw"—the inspector's tone was dry—"I asked you a question, and I'll be obliged if you'll answer it."

"But I don't know what you mean. What does he mean?" and she again addressed herself to Bill

"I asked you, Miss Shaw, when you last saw Miss Sally Meredith."

Etta had a moment of indecision Then in the nick of time she remembered the meeting with Eleanor Farquhar, and said with an air of offence

"I don't know why you ask me that, but of course I have no possible objection to answering any question. I met Miss Meredith by chance on Wednesay last, and she lunched with me at my Club."

"When did she leave?"

"With me at about half past four or five o'clock. I had my car outside, and I drove her to the Piccadilly Tube Station and dropped her there."

"You'd be prepared to swear to that."

"Of course," Etta stared at him with hard blue eyes. "And now, perhaps you'll tell me why you ask me all this, and what Major Armitage has to do with this—this inquisition? Have you gone into the Police, Major Armitage?"

She gave her high laugh, and Bill felt his old antagonism rise until it almost choked him. The woman rang false, and if she had injured Sally, if she had moved a finger to injure his little Sally his little darling Sally! He looked gravely at Etta Shaw and did not say a word, whilst

POSTPONES VISIT TO WALES

Will Visit Coolidge at Summer White House to Talk Over Situation

Washington, July 16 (Universal).—With the country facing the grave danger of a coal strike, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis has been summoned from Washington to Swampscott by President Coolidge. Secretary Davis intended to sail the end of this week to join his family, now in Wales, but if developments in the negotiations between the anthracite miners and operators at Atlantic City fail to give definite hope of an agreement, he will probably call off the trip.

TO VISIT COOLIDGE.

Davis wants to be in a position to threw the full weight of the entire conciliation machinery of the government into any possible breach

On his return to Washington from the Middle West, today, Mr Davis plunged into an intensive study of the whole coal situation

He had a conference with Director of Conciliation Hugh L. Kerwin and Conciliation Commissioner Hywell Davies, the department's coal expert. They placed before him the latest reports of the department's two unofficial observers at the Atlantic City meeting

CONSULTS GREEN.

The secretary also had a visit from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. They were closeted for more than an hour, during which Kerwin and Davies were called in

Asked his views of the prospects of a strike or agreement, Secretary Davis said to Universal Service

"I am a conciliator. There always is hope of an amicable settlement as long as negotiations are going on. There is no indication as yet that a break impends. We have two of our very best men there as unofficial observers. I am hopeful of an agreement."

Gov. Pinchot Calls Coal Conference

Atlantic City, July 16 (A P)—Governor Pinchot has summoned his two official observers at the anthracite scale conference here to meet him in Harrisburg, Pa., today to make a full report on developments thus far

David Williams director of the Pennsylvania Bureau of the Industrial Relations, and Joseph J. Walsh secretary of the Bureau of Mines have been following the negotiations since the tri-district conference at [illegible]enton. The interest of the Governor at this juncture was said to indicate his desire to be ready for any emergency

Anthracite operators today said the miners must keep hard coal affairs strictly divorced from soft cola if pending engotiations to renew the wage contract on its expiration August 31 are to be a success.

Miners replied they never [illegible] any other intention

Spokesmen for the mine owners inferred from the absence in the West of John L. Lewis, miners international president presumably on soft coal matters, that the International Union was subordinating the anthracite situation

COLORADO AND MONTANA FIGHT BIG FOREST FIRES

Missoula, Mont., July 16 (AP)—Scores of dangerous forest fires are burning in the Kootenai, Kanikau and Pend O'Rielle National Forests. Forest service officials say the situation is the most menacing in years, and fear the heavy wind may drove the flames into villages. In Colorado a forest fire in Coal Creek Canyon, northwest of Denver, has burned over 1,000 acres of timber. Volunteer fighters report it temporarily checked.

Hero From B. C.

230-POUND MAN SAVED BY VET FROM WATER

Jeremiah Mackey, Jr., twenty five years old of No. 520 Broadway South Boston a student at Boston College, was the hero of a thrilling rescue when he brought John Carroll of Dorchester to safety when the latter was stricken with cramps while swimming at Carson Beach

Carroll, who weighs 230 pounds and is reputed to be a strong swimmer, was swimming from the breakwater to the Mosquito Fleet at South Boston when he was overcome

Despite the man's weight and the fact that he was more than sixty yards from shore Mackey succeeded in bringing him to the beach

Mackey, who was a [illegible] gator in the Army Transport Service during the war, has two previous rescues to his credit

HIDE OTHER WOMAN IN 'MERRY' WIDOW' DIVORCE

New York, July 16 (A P).—Mrs Ethel Jackson Baynes, originator of the title role in "The Merry Widow" in the United States, was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce today from her husband George McLeod Baynes. The decree was signed by Supreme Court Justice Cropsey in Brooklyn on the report of a referee which recommended absolute divorce

The "other woman" was described as being about 35 years old with gray hair, but was unnamed

CAN'T IDENTIFY ALLEN IN CARBARN HOLDUPS

John R. Allen of South Boston who was arrested at the grave of his father last Sunday and charged with two Cambridge holdups was not implicated in the spectacular holdup at the Elevated carbarn in Brighton. Of this the police were convinced when several El employes who witnessed the holdup and shooting failed to identify Allen.

BREAKS NECK IN DIVE INTO SHALLOW WATER

Narragansett Pier, R. I., July 17 (A P)—Diving from a rock into shallow water, Rody Marshall of Pittsburgh, Pa., suffered a broken neck and was taken to a hospital

Saved at Carson Beach

John Carroll, fifty years old, of No 844 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, was rescued from drowning at Carson Beach, South Boston, by Joseph Mahoney, a life guard there. The man had gone down for the third time when the guard reached him.

COOLIDGE GUARD IS HEROIZED

Secret Service Man Shares Honors With "Cal" on Visit to Old Quincy Home

By BERT FORD

Swampscott, July 16—Most boys dream of going away from their home to seek their fortunes and returning heroes. It is one of the air castles of youth, but few are lucky enough to get the kick out of it that Walter Ferguson did on Wednesday when President and Mrs. Coolidge visited Quincy

Walter at times seemed to be giving the President a close race for popularity, because Quincy is Walter's bailiwick and he had been away in Washington eight or nine years as a secret service operative helping to guard the lives of Presidents of the United States

The salutations to Walter from the crowd were like a barrage. Even cheers for the President and Mrs. Coolidge did not interrupt them. Everybody was delighted to see "Fergie" and he was just as happy to be home

GETS MOTHER'S KISSES

And before he knew it Walter ran plumb into the eager arms and warm kisses of his mother in the crowd that surged about the birthplaces of John Adams second President of the United States and that of John Quincy Adams his son, second, who served as the country's sixth chief executive

Mrs. Ferguson blushed like a schoolgirl in her pink gingham dress. She sure is a young woman to have such a husky son as Walter. She had been watching for him and had, with some difficulty, held her place in the front rank of squirming spectators when along strode Walter, tall, black-eyed and tanned and as alert as a fox for any untoward movement in the crowd

No wonder Mrs. Ferguson had eyes for the President and Mrs. Coolidge until after she had found and hugged Walter, and then she forgot the others in the fervent welcome given to the head of the nation and his wife

When "Dick" Jervis commanding the secret service squad that guards the President and Mrs. Coolidge learned the chief was going to visit "Fergie's" home town he placed Walter in charge of local arrangements. As master of ceremonies Walter made good

BIG DAY FOR FERGUSONS

President Coolidge did not notify Mayor Barbour because it is his wish on such visits to make them as near the role of a private citizen on vacation as the Chief Executive of 100,000,000 constituents possibly can

In other words it was a strictly informal visit to the shrines of two former Presidents and the scale and fervor of the impromptu welcome staged by the citizens of the South Shore city pleased and surprised the presidential party

Walter Ferguson planned the details for the docking of the U. S. S. Mayflower at Fore River Yard with the officials of the Bethlehem Ship building Corporation and Chief Goodhue, under whom Walter served as a patrolman on the Hough's Neck beat before becoming a secret service operative provided excellent police protection

And Walter's brother Leonard one of the Quincy traffic policemen, was very much on the job. So it sure was a big day for Quincy and the Ferguson family.

Overcome by Gas

Wesley C. Coleman, 48, married of No. 610 Columbus avenue was found unconscious in a room in the rear of his store at No. 92 Hammond street, Roxbury. Gas was escaping from an open burner attached to a wall bracket.

Coleman was taken to the City Hospital where it was said his recovery seemed probable.

SHOVEL SPOILS ROMANCE OF ROBBER CAVE

Contractor's Tool Foils Discovery of 'Captain Lightfoot's' Lair in Fellsway

The lair of Captain Lightfoot the Highwayman, better known as Mike Martin, a freebooter who a century or more ago levied tribute on wealthy travelers in Somerville, remains undiscovered just when all Somerville believed the hundred-year-old mystery had been solved.

A steam shovel, excavating for building operations at Ten Hills farm, Fellsway West, Somerville, uncovered the mouths of two caves about twenty-five feet apart.

"Ah! At last the mystery of Mike Martin is solved," declared the older men among the workers.

They recalled the stories of how Mike Martin, a sort of Robin Hood, roamed the countryside on his wonderful horse "Thunderbolt," leaping upon the rich travelers and then retreating to some secret lair with the hue and cry behind him. Mike, finally arrested in 1822 for robbing and beating Major John Bray, was penniless at the time he was taken. His wealth was believed to have been stored in his secret hiding place, and when Major Bray died of his injuries, Mike was hanged.

The treasure has never been found.

When the caves were uncovered there was much excitement. The Somerville police appeared on the scene.

Up until this point the romance and glamor of buried treasure was perfect.

A policeman entered one of the caves. He returned with a dusty, rusty old shovel.

Then the romance went a-glimmering. Painted on the shovel was the inscription "John Stewart & Sons, Contractors."

The contracting firm was engaged in operations in that section about ten years ago, thus explaining the caves and the shovel.

"MASKED COUNTESS" IN INDIAN GUISE

There is more wonderment mixed with admiration than ever this week over the "Mysterious Masked Countess," who is puzzling the dining and dancing guests at Pemberton Inn. Her latest sensation is a stunning Indian costume of white leather, especially created for her in Paris.

SAVES 2 FROM GRIP OF ELEVATOR DOORS

Sanford, Me., July 16—Jacob Tayloy, overseer of the filling department at the Goodall Worsted Company's mills, saved two lives. Herbert Adams, an employe, had entered a freight elevator with some bags and had started out for more, misunderstanding the advice of the elevator operator, Isaac Howlett, that there was not time to get the rest.

Howlett pressed a button to close the two elevator doors operating vertically, but immediately noticed that Adams was about to be caught between them. He tried to save Adams and witnesses state that he himself would have been crushed with Adams, had not Taylor reversed the mechanism.

I [illegible] putting up vegetables [illegible] first I'll talk about [illegible] of canning string [illegible] wax beans

PUTTING UP BEANS

The green "Refugee [illegible] Green Pod [illegible] for canning. The [illegible] picked while very [illegible] and [illegible] as possible. [illegible] beans within the [illegible] the same size at [illegible] and not as [illegible] beans and cut them in two-inch lengths [illegible] Blanch them for five [illegible] a soda bath (1 tsp soda to [illegible] of water [illegible] bath (1 tsp salt to 1 quart [illegible]) for twenty [illegible] treatment will keep [illegible] green [illegible] and make [illegible] more attractive [illegible] and pack quickly. The [illegible] be packed in large [illegible] square jars. If they are packed [illegible] they should be [illegible] lengthwise in the [illegible] with brine (2½ ounces salt to 1 gallon [illegible] water) and processed in the hot water bath intermittently; or they may be treated in a steam canner for three quarters of an [illegible] temperature of 240 degrees [illegible] ten pounds steam pressure [illegible] be sufficient to sterilize beans [illegible] quart jars.

The wax beans are handled [illegible] same way as the string beans. Sometimes the seasoning of sugar and salt is added to the wax beans when packing.

And the method for beets and carrots.

CANNED BEETS

Beets used for canning should be uniform deep red [illegible] throughout. The Detroit [illegible] best variety for canning. [illegible] young tender [illegible] should be [illegible] uniform sizes together and steam for twenty minutes or boil [illegible] cooked to loosen the skins. Do not allow cold water to touch the beets after they are cooked, as it is apt to cause them to lose their color. Peel and pack whole the beets which average one inch in diameter; those above two inches are cut into slices. Cover the beets in the cans with clear hot water. The flavor of the finished product is better if no seasoning is added during the canning. Process the quart jars from one to two hours.

Carrots used for canning should be young and tender and not more than 1½ inches in diameter. Wash, scrape carefully, and steam or boil until three-fourths cooked and cut into lengths of the jar, sliced or diced. Fill the jars and cover with brine made with 2½ ounces of salt to one gallon of water, and process for one hour.

An attractive pack of [illegible] glass may be made by placing [illegible] circles in layers and fitting the second layer into the space [illegible] the first layer. Repeat until [illegible] jar is filled. The centre [illegible] filled in as each outside [illegible] placed against the glass.

Once in while I get a letter from [illegible] member reporting a failure [illegible] from the cold pack method. Now the cold pack method may be relied upon to kill the bacteria that are present on the food or in the [illegible] and provided directions are carefully followed and the periods for sterilizing are accurately counted, there is absolutely no reason for one jar out of one thousand going bad even in the hands of the inexperienced housekeeper.

You may have thought [illegible] followed directions absolutely, but one member lost eight quarts of asparagus because [illegible] the bottom of her boiler with no provision for circulation beneath the jars.

Another woman lost twenty quarts of string beans because she had picked and prepared them one day and put them up the next day.

And another member lost seventy-five quarts of this same vegetable because she used old rubbers.

Even so, remember more fruit and more vegetables have been canned by American housekeepers than ever before and the proportion of loss was exceedingly small, about 1 002 per cent out of 1[illegible] quarts of fruit and vegetables in 1917.

WHY THEY SPOIL.

Here are some things that may explain why your jars spoiled, if any of them did spoil:

1st—You did not blanch and cold dip.

2d—You blanched for four minutes when the timetable said five minutes.

Or

3d—You counted the time when you put the jars in the water instead of waiting until the water was actually boiling; full time at boiling temperature is imperative.

Or

4th—You forgot to note if the water was boiling the entire period.

Or

5th—You used no rack to support jars and to allow for circulation of water beneath them.

Or

6th—You used poor rubbers.

Or

7th—You used jars with rough rims, incapable of perfect sealing.

9th—You added more liquid after the sterilizing period instead of finishing the sealing as rapidly as possible.

LESSON NO. 12
THE THREE CIRCUIT SET

The three circuit set is an ingenious departure from the old fashioned single circuit outfit. In fact most of the single circuit sets can be converted to a three circuit very easily. The main difference in the latter is that the antenna circuit is aperiodic, or untuned. This, of course, allows the variable condenser to be shunted across the secondary winding of the variocoupler, and forms a closed tuned circuit. This arrangement gives very sharp tuning.

Energy is imparted to the secondary winding of the coupler from the antenna by means of a few turns of wire wound on the same form. Regeneration is obtained by the use of a tickler coil, as in the single circuit set. Owing to the fact that the rotary plates of the tuning condenser may be grounded in this circuit, there is absolutely no body capacity.

Children like the flavor mellow ripeness adds

OFFER a child a ripe banana and see eager eyes light up in a sparkle of anticipation. That childish delight, that homely hankering for banana flavor, is Nature's way of saying, "Ripe bananas are a delicious, nutritious, easily digested fruit." Buy bananas by the dozen. Let them ripen at home—not in the ice-chest, but at room temperature. When all trace of green is gone and flecks of brown appear upon the skin, a banana is ripe, easily digested, nourishing and delicious.

BANANA FLUFF

Cut ½ pound fresh marshmallows into five pieces each. Whip ½ pint heavy cream stiff, add 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ cup sugar and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Stir in cut marshmallows, and 1 cup walnut meats, broken. Set on ice, in a bowl, several hours. Just before serving whip in 1 cup sifted ripe banana pulp. Serve on ice cream, or with crushed strawberries on top

BUTTER—of all the things you eat—is most susceptible to changing seasons. Ordinary butter varies from month to month. It is striking tribute to the genius of the Fairmont creameries that Fairmont's Better Butter has always the same sweet June flavor whenever, wherever you buy it.

Tonight try Fairmont's Better Butter. Nothing could be more delicate than its dainty flavor, its fresh aroma—in which has been caught and held some of Nature's own fragrant richness. Put a golden lump in the dish of tender string beans. Taste for yourself how it adds magic goodness to vegetables. If you are having chops, broil them in Fairmont's and serve them with plenty of the delicious golden-brown gravy you'll have left in the griddle.

Tomorrow night, the next night, next month, or six months from tonight—try Fairmont's Better Butter. Have chops and broil them in Fairmont's. You'll notice no whit of difference between the delicious flavor then and that which whets your appetite now. June—every month in the year—that's Fairmont's flavor! And to make true this one thing alone, we spend more than $250,000 every year. Your grocer carries

FOREIGN NET MAN THREATENS TO WIN TROPHY

U. S. STARS BATTLE TO KEEP BOWL

Invaders Have Even Chance of Victory at Longwood; Miss Wills Plays Again Today

By MYLES McSWEENEY

Chances are now even that the Longwood Bowl will be won by a foreigner for the first time since the annual cup tournament was inaugurated 23 years ago.

Four foreign stars will play four Americans in the matches today and upon the outcome may depend the fate of the cup.

Spectators, who have for the last three days [illegible] tennis [illegible] matches [illegible] promise to bring out the best playing of the week.

At three o'clock [illegible] present holder of the [illegible] will meet Gerald [illegible] Australian Davis Cup [illegible]. At the same hour Miss Helen Wills [illegible] make her second appearance at Longwood in a match against Miss Edith Sigourney.

DEMPSEY WANTS GENE TUNNEY FIRST

New York, July 16 (A.P.)—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion and his bride, the former Estelle Taylor, returned from Europe on the liner Homeric.

Dempsey said he was prepared to fight once this year, probably in September, with Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion as his opponent.

As for a fight with Harry Wills, Dempsey said he would be ready for him next year.

Dempsey said he had an offer [illegible] to fight at Michigan City, Ind., on Labor Day with Bartley Madden as an opponent, but wanted time to consider this before accepting.

Relative to his status with the New York State Athletic Commission Dempsey said he expected to straighten matters out with the commission some time next week.

He said his contract with Jack Kearns did not expire until Sept. 1. [illegible] Kearns would book [illegible] for him.

JAEGER'S GRIT MAKES HIM SENSATION

By FRED C. LANE

To forge to the front under adverse conditions and prove a success after the rank and file of men have branded you as a poor possibility is the experience of Charles Jaeger, Nat Butler's latest pace following sensation.

Some five years back, Jaeger, then a kid, bought himself a bike from money saved selling papers in and about Newark. He had heard of Frank Kramer and the king pins in the bike game and like all youngsters aspired to some day hold down that position.

Riders of Kramer's ability are few and far between and Jaeger after three years of riding was in neither class.

In company with a few others more hopeless than himself, he shipped aboard a tramp steamer for Europe. As a seaman he had the success as when astride a wheel. Fortunately for Jaeger and his friends, the captain was soft hearted and he was dropped off "somewhere in France."

Most everybody has heard of how opportunity knocks at the door. Some say but once, yet never the less it came Jaeger's way and he wasn't lacking. It happened in Berlin, Germany. He managed to get that far. How he did it we can't tell but he arrived there so the story goes.

The Berlin promoters were up in arms about the time Jaeger arrived. Not over the war, but because their star rider failed to appear. It was nearing race time and the hair pulling was still in progress.

Up steps Dick Merriwell and in a nonchalant manner informs the management he can follow the motors and beat the field. It sometimes pays to be cockey. This was one occasion. A pace-following machine was furnished and Jaeger mounted his wheel and incidentally beat the field of foreign riders. It was the start. He had found himself.

Like Jaeger thrilled the mob that stormed the Berlin Velodrome, so has he in his two starts at the Revere cycle track thrilled the following that Nat Butler has build about him. Though only a kid of twenty Summers he stands today as the most promising bike rider in this country.

We almost forgot to tell you. He is the gamest bike rider in the business. As proof we cite an incident that happened while the Golden Wheel meeting was in progress recently. Straining every nerve and muscle in his body to hold a lead against the best riders obtainable Jaeger's front tire punctured, throwing him to the flat. At the time of the accident he was running close to forty-five miles an hour.

We have yet to see one return to the track after such a fall. But Jaeger broke all precedents. Against the advice of Dr. Gately he resumed riding and incidentally made himself one of the most popular riders ever to leave the mark at the Revere saucer.

FLOWERS TO GET $6,000 FOR M'CARTHY BOUT

RING STARS GET HUGE PURSES

Maloney and Sharkey Have Been Two of the Season's Leading Money-Makers

"HOW much money do the fighters get?"

Al shot the question across the sport desk. It hit us flush on the jaw and bounced to our desk. The question was still there shrieking at us for an answer as we opened our mass attack on friend Remington.

Jack Conway

We'll let the promoters and managers give the answer. Hear from their own lips the story of gold as reflected by the merry tattoo of padded mitts upon the body of a rival.

From returns filed at the office of the Boxing Commission by the Suffolk A. A. we find that the Maloney Solomon bout drew a gate of $17,000.

"What was Maloney's end?"

Johnny McGrath, manager of the South Boston heavyweight, was on the receiving end to this verbal thrust.

"We got $4,845," said McGrath. "This was 30 per cent. of the gate after the payment of the State tax of five per cent.

"This was not as much money as we got for fighting Sharkey, but it was ample. The Sharkey match netted us $7,500, which was the biggest purse Maloney ever received. We had a flat guarantee for the tussle with no percentage privilege. If we had got 30 per cent. of the gate that night, our share would have been $26,800, as the show drew $56,000. But as the affair was for the American Legion we went in without any percentage privilege."

George Lawrence, co-manager with Joe Woodman of the Central American champion, called into play his best Australian accent and answerd:

"A tidy sum of $4,037. We got 25 per cent. of the gate."

TOM GOODWIN, matchmaker of the Suffolk A. A., was next placed on the witness stand. Goodwin has probably paid out more money to fighters during the past three years than any promoter in Boston. Big figures don't worry him.

Goodwin admitted giving Pancho Villa three guarantees of $5,000 each and making money on each show.

"Next to Dempsey Villa was the best box office attraction in the boxing game," said Goodwin. "He had color and always furnished the spectacular. No promoter ever lost money on the sensational little Filipino. I guaranteed him $5,000 on three occasions and didn't worry as much about my shows as when I had the boxers in on a small percentage without any guarantees."

"How much is Tiger Flowers getting for fighting Pat McCarthy next Monday night?" we ventured.

"Six thousand dollars," was the reply. "And he's worth it. He is one of the greatest box office attractions in the game. Pitted against a local favorite like McCarthy, Flowers will play to the greatest crowd that has ever attended a boxing contest at Braves Field, not even barring the Maloney-Sharkey turn out."

Messrs. Mack and McKirdy of the Commercial Club will bear testimony to the tremendous drawing powers of the Tiger. He boxed five times for the Commercial Club this year and the house never went under $11,000. Flowers usually had a guarantee of from $3,500 to $5,000.

JOHNNY BUCKLEY, manager of Jack Sharkey, New England heavyweight champion, was then asked to tell something about big purses.

"Sharkey is getting a $3,000 guarantee with a 35 per cent. privilege for his bout with Leo Gates on July 2" at the Faneuil Club," said Buckley. "Jack was paid $7,500 for the Maloney bout. He has been offered a $12,000 guarantee and a 35 per cent. privilege for another Maloney match. We accepted a $15,000 guarantee to battle Harry Wills at Michigan City, but the Brown Panther wouldn't take the match."

"Tell us something about the preliminary boys' purses," we asked Buckley.

"They fight for board and dinner money," was the reply. "In Boston a preliminary boy gets $100 to $200 for eight rounds. They pay as high as $500 for a feature semi-final, though the average semi-final boxer only gets from $200 to $300.

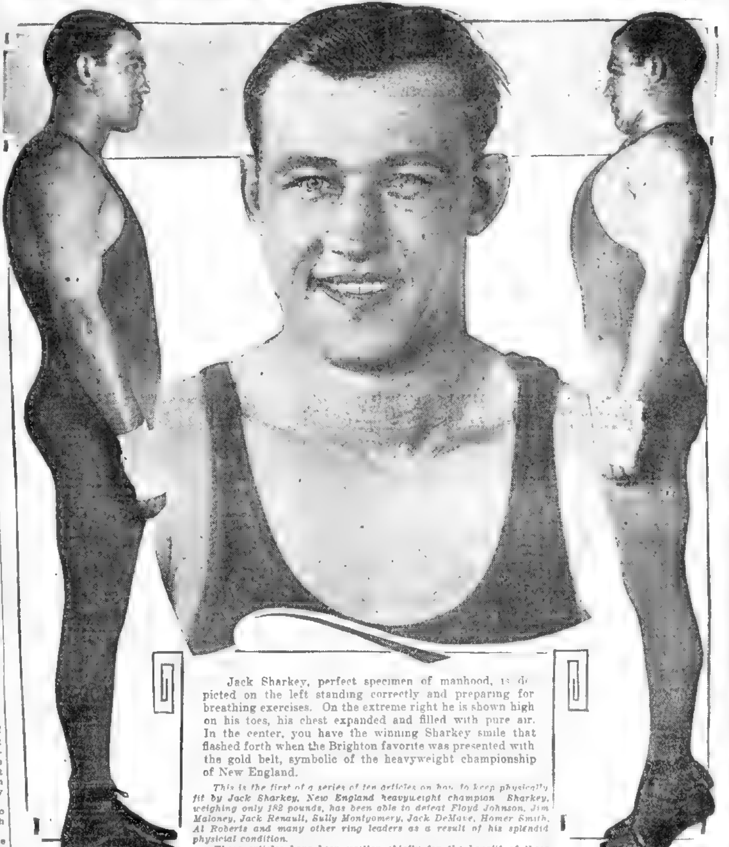
Jack Sharkey Says Regular Exercise Gives Sound Mind in a Sound Body



Jack Sharkey, perfect specimen of manhood, is depicted on the left standing correctly and preparing for breathing exercises. On the extreme right he is shown high on his toes, his chest expanded and filled with pure air. In the center, you have the winning Sharkey smile that flashed forth when the Brighton favorite was presented with the gold belt, symbolic of the heavyweight championship of New England.

This is the first of a series of ten articles on how to keep physically fit by Jack Sharkey, New England heavyweight champion. Sharkey, weighing only 182 pounds, has been able to defeat Floyd Johnson, Jim Maloney, Jack Renault, Sully Montgomery, Jack DeMave, Homer Smith, Al Roberts and many other ring leaders as a result of his splendid physical condition.

These articles have been written chiefly for the benefit of those who are not actively engaged in athletics and who are eager to know how they can obtain 100 per cent. of physical fitness.

By JACK SHARKEY

(New England Heavyweight Champion)

One can obtain very little satisfaction out of a great fortune if obliged to live on a milk and cracker diet and be moved about in a wheel chair.

The only way to get the fullest possible joy out of life is by having a sound mind in a sound body.

There are some people who are unfortunate in having been born into the world with weak bodies which have some fundamental fault which cannot be corrected. But even these individuals can build up their weakened bodies so that they can get every possible bit of sunshine out of life.

The untimely death of Pancho Villa, former world's flyweight champion, brought home to me the necessity of taking care of the small things about the human makeup.

Villa first had a toothache, then an ulcerated tooth. The septic condition spread to the throat. Death resulted while the best surgeons in California did valiant duty in an effort to save the life of the colorful little Filipino.

The ordinary ulcerated tooth is caused by neglect. People are too apt to neglect their teeth. They do not visit their dentist regularly. They wait until they are obliged to do so as a result of a toothache. Infection may have then set in. Even though the troublesome tooth is extracted, as in Villa's case, the poison has got its start through the system. A septic condition results. This often causes death.

The death of President Coolidge's youngest son was due to a septic condition of the foot caused by a stone bruise.

These two cases illustrate the necessity of taking care of the small details in connection with the human body.

I have been asked to tell readers of the Boston Evening American how to keep up their health reserve and avoid illnesses.

First, I appoint you your own manager. I shall give you the advantages of my experience, but you must be your own trainer.

Study your own body. No two people are alike. What is good for one will ruin another. When I first started boxing I worked out under the direction of various people who told me what to do. I found myself stale and tired in a number of bouts. This was because I had done too much exercising.

I then decided to become my own trainer. I did what exercises I considered necessary to keep myself in topnotch condition. I found this method successful and defeated Sully Montgomery, Jack Renault and Jim Maloney.

For the average person I would say exercise WITH MODERATION. Most of us are liable to overdo things. Our enthusiasm sways our judgment. We exercise to a point where we are candidates for a hospital cot.

This is particularly true of the man or woman who works in an office and who gets a two weeks vacation each day. I have seen men who do not do any regular exercising during the year work out as hard as Dempsey would training for a title bout while on their vacations.

Be moderate in your exercises, especially when you are not in the best of physical condition. Even when you have perfected your condition, be moderate. But be regular. It will not do you much good to exercise a great deal one day each week and take things easy on the other six. You will get much better results by doing a little work each day.

[illegible] countered the term, "hands [illegible] ing." That means that the hands [illegible] club throughout the swing. [illegible] hands [illegible] immediately lose the sense of hand control. The hands should maintain an absolute control of the club all the way through. I mean by this that in the back swing the feeling is that you put the club back to the top, with the hands. At the top the club is held with the hands. From the top you throw the club forward, entirely with the hands. Your throw is for a complete circle of the clubhead and sometimes it is a good idea to feel that the ball is not there at all. Too much consciousness often is spent on the ball, not enough on the idea of swinging the club with the hands.

BRAVES OUT TO KNOCK PIRATES OFF ROOF

By NICK FLATLEY

Our submerged Braves may win the National League pennant. Not for themselves but for either the [illegible] or the [illegible] Bancroft's club, which has a [illegible] midseason grip on the [illegible] of the ladder, is the most dangerous [illegible] league leaders and [illegible] contenders.

Some time ago the Braves knocked [illegible] the Giants [illegible] and booted the Pittsburgh [illegible] onto the [illegible]. That made a baseball [illegible]. Now the Braves are apparently all set to upset the Pirates off the roof and [illegible] Giants on their [illegible].

Nick Flatley

The [illegible] [illegible] the Corsairs [illegible] helped the champions [illegible] get within half a game of the [illegible]. The [illegible] was [illegible] and [illegible] the Braves quietly dropped four in a row to the Reds, who are not really contenders, even in their own minds.

That's the beauty of the W[illegible] [illegible] though. The [illegible] American [illegible] [illegible] they produce great pitching.

LARRY BENTON, the slim, debonair Brave chucker, has been admitted into the ranks of the [illegible]. The gamblers make the Tribe favorites when the young man takes the mound. He's the Tribe's ace [illegible] now and [illegible].

Last [illegible] Benton [illegible] Reds [illegible] the [illegible] ting Pirates on their ears. He curbed them with six hits. Carey, Cuyler, Barnhart and Wright all went hitless. Bigbee, McInnis and Oil Smith, pinch hitting, were turned back. That sort of a performance merited a victory.

OUR Mister Benton couldn't stop [illegible] Traynor, [illegible] though the lanky third baseman isn't being stopped by anybody. He's the real dynamite in the hostile machine. He socked a lusty triple and a rollicking homer to make the fellow villagers happy, and really kept his gang in the ball game. Pie sort of slumped last year, but has more than made up for it this season. He's worth a mint of money on the hoof and has a remarkable faculty of coming through in pinches. He has figured prominently in almost every rally that built up the Corsair [illegible]. It'll probably beat the Braves a couple of times before he slips away, but his deeds of valor haven't any real sting for Boston fans.

PIE TRAYNOR hit two for Somerville that show why he rated the most dangerous [illegible] on the leading club. He has everybody beaten a mile in the field.

LEE MEADOWS, who is leading the league, with 13 wins and four losses, was due to toss today. Genewich was in line for the Braves.

RUNYON SAYS

What Beat Slattery
Matter of Style
Tom Cowler's Right
Kearns Avoided It
Old Soldier Bartfield

By Damon Runyon

THE writer doubts that a boxer ever lived who couldn't be defeated by some clouting contemporary.

Damon Runyon

WHEN Jack Kearns was [illegible] [illegible] heavyweights of the period. Tom Cowler of England, who became [illegible] in later years.

The perennial and optimistic [illegible] the old Corbett [illegible] heavyweight champion to [illegible] a project speedily [illegible] discovered what he thought were traces of "Barnaby" in Thomas, the same being sometimes called timidity.

BUT Cowler was a terrific hitter with his right hand, and Kearns felt that Dempsey was too [illegible] when [illegible] there.

Had Tommy [illegible] ever planted that right of his in the same spot in [illegible] career of Dempsey's career, Dempsey might not have had any career.

But, of course, Kearns didn't make that match. It was Walker's own idea before he tied up with Kearns.

THERE was one welterweight contender [illegible] with Greb who could always give Greb a terrific battle, and has even had him on the floor.

Greb is perhaps just as well pleased that old Soldier Bartfield isn't around to pester him with challenges. Bartfield and Greb fought time and again. The soldier always met Greb with the "Windmill's" own tactics, slopping and [illegible] around with scant regard [illegible] points of boxing.

A post-mortem of that one lent at [illegible] discloses that the [illegible] not have been made [illegible] handlers. That of course, is [illegible] a second guess.

Slattery has a straight-up stiff-[illegible] style of boxing, and didn't know how to punch downward at the [illegible] Shade [illegible] he attempted the very [illegible] the left hand [illegible] the forehead of the [illegible] until he gets [illegible].

But Slattery hadn't had enough experience with [illegible] to succeed [illegible]. He had been accustomed to stand-up fellows who [illegible] at their [illegible].

HOWEVER, had this writer been handling Slattery he would [illegible] with Shade if only on the [illegible].

Slattery [illegible] in three rounds a [illegible] rather difficult style of boxing who holds a decision over Shade. This is Frankie Schoell of Buffalo. Afterward Shade took a decision over Schoell.

WOMEN CAN SMOKE ON DETROIT TROLLEYS

Detroit, July 16.—Men and women may smoke while riding on the Detroit street railway lines after tonight, an ordinance of the city of Detroit and the united opposition of members of the council notwithstanding.

Permission for women to smoke in cars was explained by Frank J. Denney, Mr. Wallace's chief assistant, this way:

"There is no law in the state of Michigan that prevents women from smoking. If they want to smoke and the privilege is extended to men there is no reason why they should not be permitted to do so."

Mix These Ingredients for a Happy Marriage

JUDGE WALTER GATES of Chicago has finished his seventh thousandth alimony hearing. Since he has been on the Superior bench he has presided over alimony court and has found occasion to study the whys and wherefors of marital happiness. From the bench he dealt both in alimony and reconciliations. The total amount of alimony he has ordered paid reaches thousands of dollars.

The question has arisen in Judge Gates' court: "What sort of marriage has the best chance to last?"

"One would think," said the judge, "that after daily listening to stories of matrimonial troubles I might become cynical, but the effect has been the reverse. I have not lost faith in marriage; rather, I appreciate it more. I believe I am a real optimist. Marriages are made in heaven and all things made in heaven were meant to last.

"Were I asked to construct a hypothetical marriage that would be expected to last and perpetuate happiness I would take:

"1—A girl of 19 and a boy not more than 25 who have known each other not less than six months and have been engaged not less than two months.

"2—They should be from the same level of life, preferably the children of comfortably well-off parents, with no divorce in the immediate family, and similar standards of living.

"3—They should be of the same nationality, at least of the same religion.

"4—They must have had, before marriage, a thorough discussion of their financial situation and an honest understanding of what the bridegroom can provide and what the bride is willing to accept.

"5—The bridegroom should have a definite plan for his business future, and should be started, at least, on the road to a positive goal. The bride should have the same knowledge of her business—that of home-making—as she expects her husband to have, no more and no less.

"7—My young couple should have their children while they are young.

"8—The wife and mother who seeks an interest outside her home whether in society or in business, seriously jeopardizes her married career.

"9—The most important thing with which I would have any young 'ideally suited' couple bear in mind is the absolute necessity for patience with each other. 'Bear and forbear' ought to be engraved in every wedding ring.

"10—No marriage can be carried on successfully unless the parties respect each other."

CHICAGO WOMEN WIN FIGHT TO SERVE ON JURIES

Chicago, July 16.—Women of Cook County are eligible for jury service.

That was the substance of a ruling handed down by Judge Philip L. Sullivan of the Circuit Court. It climaxes a long and bitter fight by the women of Cook County to be placed on equal footing with male electors.

FAIR AUTOIST CLOSES EYES IN EMERGENCY

Man has all the good qualities woman lacks when it comes to driving a car," is the candid opinion of inspectors of the Rochester, N. Y., district of the State Motro Vehicle Bureau, who examine many hundreds of man and woman applicants for operators' licenses in the course of a month.

"How do woman drivers compare with man drivers in aptitude, presence of mind, staying powers and general efficiency?" one inspector was asked, and he answered.

Woman drivers, or a majority of them, are far less reliable than men. They often meet an emergency by shutting their eyes, and they show little or no assertiveness while driving, even after several years of experience.

"A woman taking an examination will almost invariably grip the wheel as if it was straining to fly out of her hand and with a grim stare follow the line of drivers being examined as if it was the greatest task of her life. They never relax. The nervous tension most of them drive under makes it hard for them to meet an emergency calmly.

Group examinations are conducted according to Lieutenant Gertner by leading a long line of applicants through city streets with the examining inspector in the first car.

"Invariably," said Lieutenant Gertner, "there is one or more women left at the curb when the line gets under way. They can steer, brake and shift well enough, but they seem unable to coordinate their muscles to do two or more things at once.

"This does not mean there are no good woman drivers. There may be for all I know. What I have said refers to ninety-nine out of every hundred as we get them.

SIMPLICITY IS KEYNOTE FOR SUMMERSTYLES

By ALICE LANGELIER.

Paris, July 11.—With the Grand Prix out of the way and dressmakers beginning to think seriously about Winter, one realises that simplicity is the striking keynote for Summer. And, while seaside and mountain resorts are extremely bright and gay with color, never before have clothes been so simple.

Elegance of line and exclusiveness of fabric are the qualities which distinguish one style from another and make the present mode. Or perhaps there is just one unusual touch about the garment which makes it very smart and different. Grandjean is showing the simplest kind of chiffon and lace frock, which would be like hundreds of others seen on the streets were it not for the taffeta girdle, very wide and gold-embroidered and then there is its charmingly impertinent ribbon tie in front. In the full-fronted skirt are inset bands of gold lace.

Jeanne Lanvin is showing a distinctive frock, with turquoise embroidery, following a rare pattern, with a turquoise scarf around the shoulders. It, too, would be quite ordinary were it not for the irregular hemline which comes from narrow, beaded bands and the curved end of the panel.

Factory Workers Take Office Jobs to Get Vacations

Albany, N. Y., July 11.—Young persons in New York State are flocking to the "white collar jobs" because of the two weeks' vacation with pay.

This is the conclusion reached by James A. Hamilton, State Industrial Commissioner, following a survey of 1,500 factories.

The survey showed that 90 per cent. of the factories gave vacations with pay to their office workers, while only 18 per cent. gave vacations to their productive workers.

Tensely Interesting Story of Love, Adventure and Intrigue

"Hm—all foreigners," was his sole comment as Etta [illegible] each reply became more obviously worried and upon the defensive. As he closed the notebook he said: "And you dropped Miss Meredith at the Piccadilly Tube at five o'clock?"

"Yes, I told you so."

"Hm," a pause, then sharply, "Then how do you account for the fact that she was seen driving with you through Ledington nearly an hour later?"

Etta turned scarlet. If she had been less angry she might have broken down, but the inspector's manner had fretted her temper to breaking point. She stared at him furiously.

"You assert that you were alone in the car when it came through Ledington?"

Too Dark

Etta's restless brain was working quickly enough. It had been dark—too dark for anyone to have more than an impression about the inmates of a closed car. It must have been the policeman at the level crossing in Ledington who had thought that there were two people in the car. Impossible that he could be sure. Impossible.

"Of course," she said, so calm that the inspector shut the notebook, put it in his pocket and remarked that if Miss Shaw were ready he would like just to go over the house.

"You've got a warrant?"

"My aunt's room," she said stiffly, and they looked in upon a scene which she felt to be extremely reassuring.

Old Miss Shaw was sitting up in bed with an embroidered cashmere shawl about her plump shoulders. The room was full of the comfortable glow of firelight and of shaded electric lamps. The light fell softly on the old lady's pink cheeks and eyes of China blue. Her silver hair was surmounted by an old-fashioned cap adorned with frilled rosettes of narrow lace and lavender ribbon. An enormous white Persian cat lay at full length upon the pink eiderdown that covered her feet.

By the fire sat Nadine sewing. In effect a most reassuring scene. Bill was conscious of her embarrassment, and even the inspector coughed and became aware of his heavy boots.

"A man to see to the electric light, Aunt Emma," said Miss Shaw, going to the bed and speaking gently.

Bill frowned. The words came so glibly. Did one lie like that without practice? Suspicion was hot in him in spite of the old lady and her cap.

"That door beyond?" said the inspector gruffly.

"A dressing room. Nadine will show it to you." Etta's tone was indifferent, but the inspector did his duty and tramped across the soft pink carpet with its white rose garlands to inspect a dressing room which certainly did not contain Sally Meredith. Meanwhile old Miss Shaw had turned her head. The china-blue eyes dwelt vaguely on Bill and presently she said in a sweet fluttering voice:

"Do I know you, my dear?"

Bill came a step or two nearer and said:

"My name is Armitage, Miss Shaw. What a beautiful cat!"

The old lady beamed at him.

"Clarence, do you hear that?" she said. "The gentleman says you are beautiful and he's a good pussy too, which is much better than handsome." She nodded gravely and then added in a confidential whisper: "He understands everything, every word. We mustn't make him vain."

They left the room feeling that Miss Etta Shaw had scored. She herself had a slight air of conscious triumph as she passed before them up the passage and threw open a door upon the left.

"These were my Aunt Harriet's rooms. She was not herself for some time, and we had to have these bars put up. I use the sitting room occasionally."

"Now why," thought Major Armitage as he stood in the doorway—"why so much explanation?" and at the same time he was aware of the unreasonableness of this thought. He didn't follow the inspector into the bedroom and bathroom, but walked idly to the right-hand window, standing had he but known it where Sally had stood so often.

Off His Balance

His feeling for her, newly realized, had, as he himself would have phrased it, knocked him off his balance. He was conscious of her as he had never been conscious of her before, not even in the old days when he had held her in his arms and felt himself between her and the world. It was the other way round now. It was Sally who was between him and the world. She was between him and everything, so near, and so dreadfully, dreadfully dear.

He turned from the window, and with the instinct to move and do something, walked to the settee and moved one of the cushions. It was crooked, and he had the straight eye of the games-playing man. A tiny edge of white showed where the back of the settee met the seat. Half mechanically he picked up a small white handkerchief and immediately came broad awake. Four inches square, made of veined linen. How many times had he teased Sally about her handkerchiefs!

The inspector took it, turned it over.

"No mark, sir," he said.

"It's Miss Meredith's, I swear it is."

Inspector Williams shrugged his shoulders.

"Let's get on," he said without emotion. He passed into the corridor, but Bill touched Etta on the arm and held her back for a moment.

"Miss Shaw, you're angry, and perhaps have a right to be angry," he said rather gruffly. "I won't say you haven't, but if you do know anything about Sally—Miss Shaw, it's a rotten game. I mean Sally's so damned plucky, you know."

He broke off, oppressed with the sense of failure, utter failure to move this woman with the hard flushed face and angry eyes.

"I don't know what you mean. I think you're mad," said Etta Shaw.

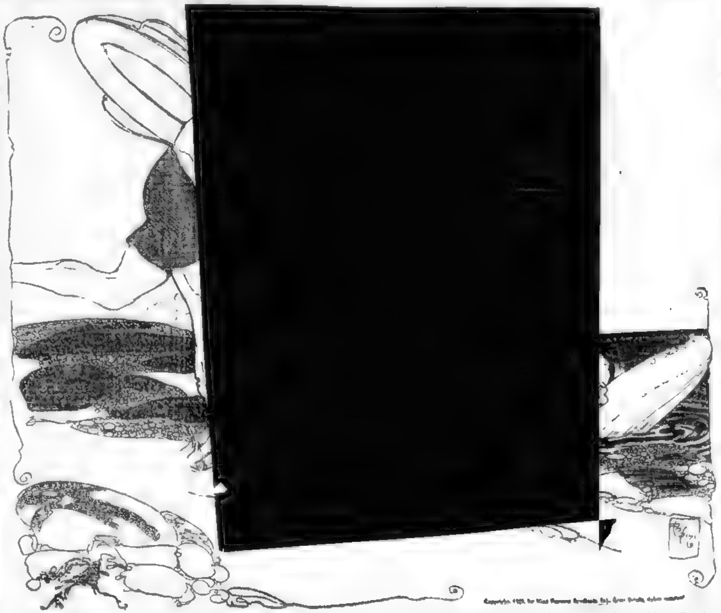
DRAWN BY POPINI



[redacted]

"HELP! Help!" Cupid's frail craft has overturned and he's almost overboard! But don't be frightened. He really isn't in any danger—he's just pretending. You know, he's such a mischievous little rascal that he does it occasionally to keep you on the alert. You might get careless when you feel too sure of his safety, so every once in so often he sends out these frantic danger signals.

Then you must both hurry to the rescue and save him. Pet him and comfort him and see that he is always happy, but don't under any circumstances become neglectful of him, for he is sensitive and the minute he feels that he is being slighted, then danger comes. Be careful of him every minute, every second, for he's much too precious ever to lose, is Love.

ROMANTIC HUSBAND

By Anne Lisle

"BE after doing what I said. To dress and meet me downstairs at once is the message I'm wishing to send Jim."

"Aren't you at Dreamwood?" I asked stupidly, because I was still half asleep.

"Could I be meeting him downstairs in five minutes if it was from Dreamwood I was talking?" asked Pat. "Call Jim. I'll be waiting."

I got up and stumbled to the room, which I more than half expected to find empty. But Jim was there—awake and staring at the ceiling. I delivered Pat's message almost curtly. Jim glared at me as if I were a stranger.

"Poor Jeanie," he said. Then he added quickly: "You'd better go back to bed and try to get some sleep. It can't be much after five. And it was two when you got here last night. Fully two."

"It couldn't have been much more than quarter past," I said. "Perhaps half past one at the most. It must have been a little before one when we left Matt's. Bert promised Lucie she would get off——"

"For the love of Mike, stop your gabbing and get back to bed!" Jim cried irritably. "It was half past one when you left Matt's. At least! Remember that. Now get out and let me hurry to get ready to meet Pat. And you sleep—sleep as late as you can. I wish you had gone with [illegible]. Never mind. Go get some sleep now."

I was far too sleepy to care how cross Jim was and much too lethargic mentally to try to figure out what could be the matter with him. I went straight back to bed, pulled down the blinds and went to sleep. When I awoke I jumped out of bed and took my bath as soon as I had telephoned my breakfast order and a request that all the morning papers be sent up with my tray.

"Yes, ma'am. I can understand your wanting them all," said the order clerk.

I thought it was nice to realize that a city as big as ours is still a small enough village so that everyone knows about a show like the Revue and understands that a member of the advertising staff wants to read all the critics have to say.

By the time I was dressed it was almost 10 o'clock. I had to telephone down a second time before my breakfast came up and then the papers were forgotten. But they came at last. I went to the door and took an armful of them from the boy who had brought them. Then I went back and took another sip of coffee before I folded back the first, prepared to skip the first page and make straight for the news of the theatre. But a flaming headline caught my eye.

I stopped, focused my eyes by drawing my brows close together, looked away to make sure I was not dreaming. [illegible] across the front page was blazoned in huge letters for all the world to see:

WHO KILLED BEAUTIFUL BROOKE DE COURCEY?
Prima Donna Found Dead Night Show Opens
ANOTHER STAR PLAYS HER ROLE
Did She Die of Broken Heart? Or Was She Murdered?

It seemed an hour before I could clear my brain sufficiently even to read [illegible] the [illegible] too brief details of this to me most poignant of all mysteries.

Bobbie and His Pa

By William F. Kirk

LAST nite for my supper I was sucker enuff to eet four (4) Dumperlings instead of one like Ma wanted me to & all nite long I had terribul Nite Mares. I dreemed that I was in a big swamp full of Crocker-Diles. It was terribul.

Bobbie, sed Pa this morning at brekfust, Bobbie you look kind of Peekled sed Pa.

I guess you wud look Peekled if you dreemed what I dreemed last nite I sed. I dreemed that I was in a big swamp full of Crocker-Diles & they was all trying to eet me at onst.

Ma laffed. Perhaps sum day you two peepul will lern to eet sparingly like I eet, she sed.

Then Pa laffed. Sparingly, like you eet, sed Pa, that is a hot one. Ha Ha Ha Ha, sed Pa.

Why the donkey laff, sed Ma. You know I do not eet much.

You eet enuff, I know that, sed Pa. Moast of the time you eet moar than I eet.

You are out of yure hed, sed Ma. You eet moar at one meel than I eet in three, sed Ma.

You both eet moar than I do, I sed. But I aint nevver going to eet no more of them Dumperlings. That was a terribul dreem I had.

Dumper-lings are all rite if thay are eeten properly, sed Ma. Thay are hevvy food & you shud eet only one of them & chew it a long time before you swaler it, sed Ma.

I aint going to tackel them no moar I sed. I will never forgit that dreem I sed. One of the Crocker-Diles had a mouth like our wud shed door I sed & it was full of teeth a foot long I sed sharper than sords. Gee it was awful, I sed.

Did you fite the Crocker-Dile, Bobbie, like a true son of yure father or did you run?

I tried to run I sed, but it is funny you cant never run in a dreem. yure feet seems tied to the ground. Why is that?

I suppose yure feet gits tangled up in the bed cloze, sed Pa. The best system for not having Nite Mares is to eet very littel at nite. Moast peepul eet too much anyway, sed Pa.

I guess so sed Ma. It is a cinch you do, sed Ma to my dad. Dont you dare say I eet as much as you, sed Ma kind of quick.

Then Pa shut up jest like he had a big Crocker-Dile affer him. Gee thay are awful animiles. I wunder what in the wurld thay are good for. I cant think of anything thay are good for Xcep to skair hevvy eeters in thare dreems but I wud rather dreem of them than dreem I am in Hadees with littel red Deemons all around me, that is a feerce dreem but Pa says that is all Hadees is, a dreem. I will now cloze.

DAILY SHORT STORY

UNBREAKABLE CHAINS

By Gordon Sayre

NOT alone in specious tales of fiction but also in real life does it sometimes happen that an unheard of uncle leaves a pleasantly astounded nephew a large sum of money.

[illegible] Hinds knew that it happened sometimes, for at this very moment he sat upon his stool he faced a battered, dog-eared "T to Z" ledger and read over and over again the short paragraph message which had just come to him from the Golden West.

"You are the only surviving relative of Daton Manning who died today. An estate amounting to a million odd is involved."

A Call Down

As Bobby read over and over this [illegible] epistle, reflecting that he cared not how "odd," the million might be, Mr. Marston happened to pass by. Mr. Marston was the boss—he would be—he was a born boss even down to the aquiline nose and acrid tone of voice. He roared:

"What the devil's wrong here? How many more times is it going to be necessary for me to tell you to keep on with your work?" Bobby flushed, in quick but repressed anger, he started to make a witty retort, but Mr. Marston flattened him utterly when he snapped out uncompromisingly again:

"Get to work!"

"Yes, sir," murmured Bobby meekly. However, he made a mighty resolve. He WOULD tell the old crow meat what he thought of him, had thought of him for years—all of the things that had festered about in his mind and a lot of new ones that he thought up on the spur of the moment.

That night Bobby called the western city on the long distance telephone. Instantly the solicitors who had wired him permitted the charge to be reversed. This concrete fact, even more than the conversation which followed convinced Bobby of the genuineness of his miraculous good fortune. All night long he lay awake arranging in orderly sequence the things that first thing in the morning he would say to his barking boss.

Fell Flat

Before going to his desk the next day Bobby walked calmly over to Mr. Marston as that worthy stood hating himself, as his stomach snarled over the breakfast he had thrown it, gazing morosely out of the window, seeing things apparently that he liked not.

"I'm leaving, boss; but, before I go I have a few things to say to you that—"

"Before I go there are one or two things that I—"

"Too busy to listen now," snapped Marston, still not removing his gaze from the window. "go get your time and beat it." Bobby gulped, tightened his muscles and stood his ground.

"I just wanted to say that—"

"Get out!" roared Marston, and this he turned from the window long enough to cast upon Bobby a look which seemed to loosen his shoe laces.

"Yes, sir," remarked Bobby, not knowing that he had said it. He wheeled like a soldier and left the room to go to the employment office for his time. A few days later when an advance check for several thousand dollars had come out of the west Bobby temporarily forgot his burning ambition to make the boss see himself as Sinclair Lewis would see him in a wild orgy of unlimited buying. Several outfits of apparel he presented himself with and even a convincing looking diamond for his tie, not to mention a hefty, if somewhat baroque red automobile.

But on the first long ride alone in the car after the instructor had turned him loose, Bobby got to thinking again of the boss.

Finally he succumbed and wheeled the car about. It was nearing the dinner hour, most of the force in the office would already be on their way to dine. As he had guessed, Mr Marston was there and almost alone. He seemed wholly unaware of Bobby's dramatic entrance in his new clothes. Bobby strode firmly up to him and received a look devastating in its contemptuousness.

Ordered Out.

"Mr Marston," he began firmly "I've just inherited—"

"You look it!" admitted Mr. Marston, "God help you now! Get out of here, I'm busy." Bobby was not to be budged.

"Sir, I have a few things I intend to—"

"Write me a letter about it." Bobby felt secretly amazed at the change that had come over him since entering the office. On the drive he had felt puissant—the equal of any man—every inch a millionaire; but, in here, under those eyes! Absolutely it was as though he were off his ledger balance and again under the yoke.

"You will have to listen to what I—" he began desperately.

"Get out!" snarled Marston, so loud that it seemed to Bobby it shook the windows. He gulped.

"Yes sir!" he said mechanically, but stood his ground nevertheless. Before, however, he had recovered his wits, Marston had swung out of the office for lunch.

That night, Bobby, from the security of his new automobile, watched outside Marston's suburban home while four desperadoes grabbed the man who would not listen, gagged him, bound him and carried him to another waiting car. To the outskirts of the south side of the city the two cars drove, the big, black car leading, with the boss securely trussed inside and the red car trailing behind with the now triumphant Bobby impatiently driving.

Faced His Boss

Arriving at a small, secluded shack, the four men willing to murder for money carried the prostrate boss inside and tied him to a post. Still under the tremendous impetus hundred dollar bills give, they removed the gag from his mouth and then retired, leaving Bobby alone with the almost apoplectic man and a feebly flickering candle. The boss glared murderously at Bobby. He twisted his arms in their bonds and tried unsuccessfully to kick his feet free. In the dim light of the candle he looked like some angry Gorgon tied to an all too frail rock.

For several moments Bobby let him struggle, and then he faced him.

"Well, Mr. Marston, this is indeed a—"

"Shut up, you fool, and untie me!" broke in Mr. Marston, in a tone that all but extinguished the candle, "what are you standing there like a damn ninny for—you saw those men kidnap me and carry me here, didn't you? I'm glad you did—if you hadn't, there's no telling what might have happened, but I wish it had been someone else at that, you dolt! Somebody who'd had brains enough to know what to do—call the police or something. You never were worth a continental and you never will be."

"Now see here, Mr. Marston, I intend to—"

"Why in Heaven's name don't you untie me? You haven't got as much good sense in that big worthless head of yours as my three-year-old son; untie me, instantly, you idiot—those men are probably gone beyond any hope of our ever catching them by this time." Bobby tried to sneer, but he didn't seem able to work the combination that brings that expression visibly to the facial muscles. The boss stabbed him with another furious glare.

"Untie me! You dunce!" he yelled in a voice so loud it shook the cabin.

"Yes, sir," agreed Bobby meekly as he proceeded to do so.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WHEN your grandpa was in action he used his language raw. The gentlemen of the late nineteenth century left most of the culture to the ladies. They grew whiskers on their conversations as well as on their chins, and their slightest comments packed a K. O. wallop. As, for instance, that classic enjoiner:

"KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON!"

The bon-mot is not in the best of standing amongst our Nicer People now, but it had a logical application to the life of those earlier days. There was plenty of occasions when a gentleman of 1875 was compelled to doff his shirt. He fought the village fire or settled political arguments in negligee, as it were. Whenever life approached a conflict he was forced to remove that hard-boiled shirt of his species and go to it as it was, or else sit in obscurity on the side lines. And so it came to be that when he wished to prevent hasty action he said: "KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON!"

Rough, But—Wholesome

"That's a rough old slogan, but a wholesome one, and as fitting now as the day it was coined. Never, in fact, has it been more necessary that we, as a nation, should be told to

"KEEP OUR SHIRTS ON!"

The war did something to every one of us. We suddenly emerged from the peaceful dwadling of our adolescent years and became conscious of ourselves as individuals and as a great and powerful nation. We began to look around and take sides and make gestures and yell at once. We broke out into a rash of criticism and civic service. And we're still going strong. From the bellhop to the billionaire we're all het up. We all want to start something or correct something or demolish something. And we don't care how mad we get or how much we annoy the other fellow in doing it. The old ideal of self-control has been swept away. It's "self-expression" now, and the wider and noiser the expression the better. It's just about time for some heavenly broadcaster to light on the topmost cloud and yell—

"KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON!"

Stop trying to make the world over! You'll simply raise your blood pressure and you won't do a whole lot of good. The world will be made over when it gets around to it, which won't be in your day or mine.

Lay Off and Keep Cool

Stop trying to make the church over! The church is what it is because people want it to be what it is. It may not suit you, but it stands aces high with a lot of the other boys. So lay off and cool off.

Stop trying to make your wife over! You liked her as she was before you married her. Why try to brand her with your copyright? She's as much right to be Herself as you have. Maybe if you'd let her be a Person instead of insisting that she be but Part of yourself you'd find a lot more joy in each other.

Stop trying to make your husband over! If his money is good enough to spend he's good enough to live with, lady. He may be rough around the edges and weak around the knees, but that's his business—not yours. Stop picking on him. If you want to look at a "perfect man," pay fifty cents for six reels of a movie hero. But give the lad who's paying your meals a little peace at home.

Stop trying to make your children over! They don't belong to you. If you set them a good example, and give them friendly co-operation, and see they're fed and educated decently, you can be fairly sure that God will attend to the rest. What if they don't turn out as you had planned? You had no business planning! They're humans. Then let them alone.

Stop Worrying

Stop trying to make your boss over! Maybe he's an unfair boss; maybe it's a rotten institution—but your no recording angel. I know it would be ever so much jollier to be bossing yourself, but probably you'd be a flop at the job, and in the meantime you've got to eat. So do the thing that's given you to do, grab off your pay check and

KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON!

Stop worrying and snooping, fussing and prying, and getting riled up. Keep a covering over your emotions. Don't waste yourself over every passing agitation or trivial upset—don't blow off steam because things don't come your way—KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON!

Does this mean that you should lead a life of inaction? It does not. There are times when it is necessary for any honorable human to strip off his reserve and pitch into the fight.

But, generally speaking, you'll have plenty of action if you will just ATTEND TO YOUR OWN BUSINESS. If you, yourself, will be one hundred per cent efficient as citizen, worker, husband and wife, mother, father, sister, brother or child, you'll be doing the greatest possible service for your family, community, nation and world.

KEEP YOUR SHIRT ON!

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength

This preparation for the removal of freckles is so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by all drug and department stores with a guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil or waste time on lemon juice or cucumbers; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine; it is this that is sold on money-back guarantee.

There had been a collision between a cart and an automobile. The policeman was taking notes regarding the accident.

"Mummy," said a small boy on the outskirts of the crowd, "why does the policeman always lick the end of his pencil before writing?"

"To make the case look as black as possible, I suppose," answered his mother.—Barbara Cole, Geisha Cottage, Plum Island, Newburyport, Mass.

SICK WOMEN ATTENTION!

Read this Remarkable Testimony Regarding Results from Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Norfolk, Virginia. — "If you only knew how many women and girls have taken your medicine by hearing my testimony, it would seem wonderful to you. Every day and every chance I have I advise some one to try it. It was in June, 1904, when I had given up ever getting well, that I wrote to you. My husband went to the drugstore and brought the Vegetable Compound home to me. In a few days I began to improve and I have often taken it since. I am now passing through the Change of Life and still stick by it and am enjoying wonderful health. When I first started with your medicines I was a mere shadow. My health seemed to be gone. The last doctor I had said he would give me no more local treatments unless I went to the hospital and was operated on. That was when I gave the doctors up. Now I am a healthy robust woman. I wish I could tell the world what a wonderful medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is." — Mrs. J. A. JONES, 317 Colley Avenue, Norfolk, Virginia.

FAMOUS FIRSTS

By Mark Stuyvesant

THE scene is a large room furnished somewhat similarly to a doctor's office. Two people are seated in comfortable, easy chairs, engaged in what appears to be an informal conversation.

But it soon becomes evident that one of them, a young lady, who is exhibiting signs of nervousness, is answering the questions put to her by the elderly gentleman opposite. Fragments of the conversation drift towards us: "And that dream was interrupted . . . a feeling of restlessness? How often have you thought of it?"

This, ladies and gentlemen, is the way modern science treats mental disturbances today. If you are suffering from a queer "complex" or you find yourself in a state of mental exhaustion, you take your problem to a psychoanalyst. He is the man who has studied the sub-conscious mind in all its stages, and who is prepared to give serious thought to your every "sympton," however trivial it may seem to the layman.

If you have a fear of high places, a dread of water, or a notion that you will be swallowed up every time you walk alone at night, the doctor of psychoanalysis traces these complexes to their origin.

Scientists now agree that the subconscious mind—that part of your mind which functions while you are asleep—is as important as the conscious or waking mind. Consequently, the psychoanalysist asks you to tell him all about your dreams, which he analyzes and interprets for you.

Once you realize where the trouble lies and understand the folly of brooding over it, you can get rid of these fears very easily.

A hundred years ago, when psychoanalysis was unknown, people who suffered from delusions or strange hallucinations were promptly confined to sanatoriums, there to await the timely intervention of death. If, however, you were suffering from a slight mental disturbance—what we would now call a "complex"—you were ridiculed and jeered at. "Imaginary ills," they were called—and dismissed with a wave of contempt.

About twenty-five years ago Mr. Sigmund Freud, at that time a young teacher virtually unknown, created a world-wide sensation through his lectures. He was a young enthusiast, with new ideas on the study of the mind and its workings, which he managed to call to the attention of the thinking world in a short time. His theories on the ego and the importance of the subconscious mind, which he taught to his eager pupils, have formed the basis of the new science of psychoanalysis.

Following Freud, such famous scientists and philosophers as Adler, Jung and Brill have taken up this fascinating study. Since psychoanalysis is really a branch of the older science of psychology, many psychologists—among them Huxley, Titchener, James, Woodworth and Poffenberger—have recognized the importance of this special study. Each year old theories and ideas on the subject are rejected, while new and more logical ones take their place.

Although Freud is credited with being the pioneer of the study of psychoanalysis as a science, we can trace its origin to Aristotle. Thousands of years ago he called attention to the fact that we could win peace of mind by releasing the emotions in our sub-conscious mind. He spoke of the drama as a means of purging the emotions by giving them free play as they entered into the tragedy that was being portrayed.

BEDTIME STORY

PALOMA SHOWS HORSE-SENSE

By Foxy Grandpa

IT was all my fault. I should have known better. I deserved exactly what happened to me. I never should have run Paloma over that hard road. It wasn't good for his feet, and, as it turned out, it certainly wasn't good for one of mine.

Paloma never would have done it—for he is as gentle as that which his name means—dove. Paloma is dove in Spanish. And my Paloma is the gentlest horse in the world.

This is how it was. I was riding home one night along the road. I felt good, and so did Paloma. It was a brisk Fall evening, so Paloma and I thought we would have a canter. So off we went. But I didn't watch the road as carefully as I should.

It was all right while the road was dirt and Paloma could dig his hoofs in—but when we turned on to a cement road it was different. There is where I should have pulled him down to a trot, or a walk, but if I had, I wouldn't be telling you this story.

I didn't pull Paloma in, but went straight on galloping down the hard cement road, and, what's more, down a hill, too, which is the worst thing of all for a horse.

Through the Autumn night we sped, and then before I knew it—you know those things happen quickly—I was hurled off of Paloma's back and over on to the side of the road as if I had been shot out of a cannon.

The poor horse was scared to death and off down the road he ran.

I collected myself. I didn't know that anything hurt for the moment. But it didn't take me long to find out. For when I started to get up, I couldn't stand on one foot. My ankle wouldn't hold me. It just wiggled and down I flopped. My ankle was sprained. It didn't feel very good either.

What to do, I didn't know. I couldn't get up. And where was my poor horse?

Several automobiles passed—but I just smelt the gasoline as they whizzed by and they never knew that I was lying there, crippled by the roadside.

I thought and thought what to do and finally dozed off, only to be awakened in a moment by the clatter of hoofs down the road.

"Someone on horseback," I thought, "maybe I can make him hear me. Help!" I shouted.

"Here in the bushes," I answered feebly.

Bobby slid off the back of his horse, and, would you believe it, it was Paloma that Bobby was riding?

It only took a moment to tell Bobby what had happened, and when he said that John, our man, was coming in the car, I remembered to ask Bobby how he knew what had happened.

"Paloma told us," explained Bobby. "He came tearing into the yard and neighed and snorted and stamped his foot. Bunny wasn't home, so I couldn't get him to talk to Paloma. Then I just got on him and he brought me here. John is coming now."

"You both showed horse-sense, Bobby," said I, when I was home and comfortable and had my ankle bound up.

"Oh, yes; my ankle's all right. I don't think I could do the Charleston just now. But give me time."

SEEING LIFE DARKLY

By Lucy Lowell

A WOMAN I know has discovered what she thinks is the badness in human nature. And she can't get beyond it.

The sun doesn't shine and the birds don't sing, and nothing is as it should be.

She writes me this way:

"Do you think the trouble is with me—or with the world? I only wish I were not so analytical and that I needn't be so wretched when I fail to find the sincerity and kindness that mean so much to me!

"I have an unhappy knack of understanding the people I meet too well. I mean I understand their motives and character instead of merely accepting the side they turn toward their friends. Sometimes it seems I almost read their thoughts. And everywhere I find selfishness and deceit and treachery. And I don't know whom to trust any more. For I have been so bitterly disappointed so often!"

Sorry as I am for her, I think the trouble is with the woman herself and not with the world!

Human nature is far from perfect. The people we know and the friends we love sometimes behave in ways to make us believe they are treacherous and insincere and self-seeking.

But if we acknowledge these characteristics and stress them in our minds, we "tune in" on treachery and insincerity and selfishness, and leave ourselves open to any of those evils which may be flying around. And we will pick up every one of them!

After all, evil is a negative quality. The good that is a part of every human being is positive.

We may close our minds to the evil and open them to the good if we will. Then we will discover good as persistently as we found evil before.

The woman I know doesn't understand the people she meets as well as she believes. Complete understanding means kindliness. And kindliness excuses failure of every sort, even failure to be quite sincere, while it searches for its own likeness—and finds it.

If you are looking for light, you don't allow yourself to be bewildered by darkness. You ignore darkness, and when you find the light darkness disappears.

An odd quirk of human character makes it strive to come up to what is expected of it.

If you let others know that you expect good of them, they are pretty sure not to disappoint you!

FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

San Antonio, Tex.—Aren't you always interested in the beginning of things, in how famous men got their start, in how mammoth enterprises were born, in how cities came to be founded, how for instance, did San Antonio come to be the biggest city in Texas?

"Who is your best informed citizen, one of the older generation, one capable of answering intelligently and analytically the question why San Antonio?" I asked shortly after arriving.

"Dr. Frederick Terrell, head of our largest financial institution, the City National Bank, who has lived here some sixty years," was the immediate reply. So, I sought out Dr. Terrell. He proved to be just the person I had in mind.

Said Dr. Terrell in reply to quizzing: "One who has watched San Antonio grow from a village of 12,000 to a city of 200,000 must hesitate to assay the elements involved in this growth or attempt to forecast future developments. The underlying causes of this city's growth have been many and have varied from time to time. The first settlers must have halted at this favored spot to take advantage of a supply of pure water.

"A valley so amply protected from the harsh northers with Gulf breezes mitigating the heat in the Summer, with a pure dry air during most of the year caused these early campers to linger. Then followed years of growth by immigration from the States and from other parts of the world. While some came under the impulse described in the couplet "when every other land rejects us, we'll pack our kits and go to Texas," the rejection was sometimes the other way about. The high class, educated German after the revolution of 1848, rejected his own land and came to San Antonio and New Braunfels and other localities. The Canary Islanders came over with Baron de Castre and established the town of Castroville, all helping materially to build San Antonio.

"And, so, the town continued to grow. The stock men required supplies of many kinds, the army bought many things locally, the increasing population demanded more and better living quarters, the simple rock houses were no longer sufficient. Thus began the industrial development of the city.

"During all the years the basic business of farming was not neglected entirely. The mesquite and cactus gave place to cotton and corn and the farmer followed that endless chain of 'raising more cotton with which to buy more land on which to raise more cotton.' He sold his cotton and bought his supplies, in San Antonio. So you can see that San Antonio just had to be. We are not afraid of the future. A town doesn't grow from 12,000 to 200,000 and then stop. We may be a little slow, think that 'manana' is just as good as today. But our tomorrows always have turned out pretty well."

NEW HAVEN 'TO DISPOSE OF ONTARIO'

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

Rumor has been persistent that the New Haven would dispose of its holdings in the Ontario, which constitute a controlling interest. From E. J. Keenan, of Hornblower & Weeks, I have the following: "We would not be surprised to hear shortly of negotiations between New York Central and New Haven relative to the taking over of New York, Ontario & Western by the former. Such a move would greatly strengthen Central's position as a trunk line road."

Morgan Butler, son of United States Senator William M. Butler, is very active in behalf of the cotton interests. He is president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, and this week addressed the first regional meeting of the association ever held in Maine.

Governor Brewster of Maine was an interesting speaker at the cotton men's meeting. He declares: "Co-operation of the manufacturer with the agriculturist is needed to bring about the development of New England."

Sir Henry Thornton, on his appearance before Boston business men, made a decidedly favorable impression in Boston. His friends here were pleased to read Ottawa advices reporting he had been engaged by the Canadian government for a further five-year term as president of the Canadian National Railways, with a salary increase from $50,000 to $75,000 a year and additional allowance of $25,000 for expenses.

President Kelley of Anaconda says: "Demand for metal products has been very large. Business in copper and copper products the first six months of the year exceeds any like period in history of the industry. Anaconda as a whole is doing a larger business than at any time and except that the basic price of copper is low, its operations are being conducted in a very satisfactory manner."

SOUTHERN COTTON MILL SHARES SELL LOWER

Gastonia, N. C., July 16.—Weekly average of 25 mill stocks shows a further decline to 113.28, against 136.60 for previous week. There was more activity in common shares than since May 1, and the decline is due largely to stocks selling ex-dividend. There is a more optimistic feeling among mill officials.

COTTON GOODS IMPORTS OFF; HELPS MILLS

Last year when the English invasion of the American cotton cloth market was in full swing concern was felt for the prospects of our fine goods mills which were forced to bear the brunt of this competition.

In only a single month in 1924 were the cotton goods imports under 10,000,000 square yards and towards the end of the year they steadily increased and reached the amazing peak of 18,682,690 square yards in January, 1925. The bulk of these importations were broadcloths. In January, 1925, 14,556,003 yards of this material passed through our customs. About 90 p. c. of these goods came from English looms.

The import figures for June show how quickly the situation has changed. Total June imports of cotton goods were but 4,254,173 square yards, a drop of 77 p. c. compared with January. Our fine goods mills are breathing easier. A New Bedford mill man, commenting on this changed status, says: "It means all the difference in the world to us. We have already noticed a considerable improvement in demand. The fine goods mills of this city are looking up."

Several causes have contributed to the new conditions. The average tariff on cotton goods is 30 p. c. Mills making finer goods have felt that they should be protected by an increased duty of about 10 p. c. to equalize costs. There was some agitation in this direction but economic conditions took a hand in the sharp advance in the pound sterling to the same result. In the middle of September, 1924, the pound was worth $4.41 and was commencing its rise to approximate parity. This represents an advance of slightly more than 10 p. c., or about what the mill men felt they needed in additional tariff protection.

AUTOS NUMBER 17,548,377 FOR JULY

Motor vechicle registration in the United States totaled 17,548,377 on July 1, 1925, a gain of 2,108,407, or 13.7 per cent. over July 1, 1924, according to a survey just completed by Automotive Industries. Registrations at the end of the first six months of the year were nearly as high as the 17,605,501, recorded on December 31, 1924, as the total for the whole of last year. With six months yet to go, total registrations by the end of this year are certain to surpass those of 1924 by a good margin, indications now being that the December 31, 1925, figure will be very close to 19,000,000.

New York, as in previous years, holds first place, 1,332,168 cars and trucks having been registered in that State since the beginning of the year. California holds second position with 1,283,203 and Ohio third with 1,232,943.

The real estate boom in Florida appears to have had a highly favorable influence on automobile sales in that State, the number of registrations today being 51.2 per cent. greater than on July 1, last year. This is the largest percentage gain recorded by any State. Texas has the largest numerical gain over last July with an increase of 191,710.

There are 6.47 persons per motor vehicle in the country today, population estimates of the Bureau of Census for July 1, 1925, being used as a basis for calculation. Fees paid into the various State treasuries by automobile owners totaled $218,333,826 for the first six months.

Motorcycle registrations dropped again, registrations in the first six months of 1925 being more than 10,000 less than in the first half of 1924. The present total is 115,400.

ME. MAN HEADS TOKIO COMPANY

Following the organization meeting of the Westinghouse Electric Company of Japan, held at the Westinghouse office, E. D. Kilburn, vice-president of the new company, made the following statement:

"The Westinghouse Electric Company of Japan is a newly organized subsidiary of the Westinghouse Electric International Company, incorporated under the laws of the State of Delaware with a capital of $1,000,000.

"The purposes of this company are to distribute Westinghouse products throughout Japan and to arrange for proper service to the many old as well as new users of Westinghouse apparatus in Japan. Adequate stocks will be carried; repair and other service facilities will be provided; and engineering and construction assistance will be supplied to the users of the company's products.

"The staff in Japan will be almost entirely Japanese. It was a simple matter to assemble this staff because there are scores of Japanese engineers who have been employed at the Westinghouse Company's works at East Pittsburg and elsewhere."

The officers of the new company are Guy E. Tripp, chairman, born in Wells, Me.; L. A. Osborne, president; E. D. Kilburn, vice-president. I. F. Baker is managing director, located at Tokio.

DIRIGO HOUSE PROVES IDEAL VACATION SPOT

The problem of where to find a moderate priced Summer hotel, not too remote from Boston, is solved by the Dirigo House, conducted by the Misses Perry on Long Island, Maine, one of the most beautiful of the islands of Casco Bay.

Long Island's clean, sandy beaches and delightful harbors offer opportunities for all water sports, clock golf, croquet, tennis, golf and twice-a-week dances are other amusements.

Dirigo House has been popular with New England vacationists for the past thirty years and is a charming home.

GLACIER PARK RATES CUT

Vacationists planning to make their playtime period really count for something this year by taking advantage of the reduced round trip rates to Glacier National Park will be interested in the special one to seven-day all expense trips in effect during Glacier season, from June 15 to September 15.

These trips take in the most beautiful places in the Park, and their cost depends upon the length of time and class of accommodations desired.

From one length of the Park to the other, everything is in readiness for the tourist.

LOW CAPE COD FARES IN EFFECT FOR SUMMER

The New Haven Railroad has announced special low rates for round trip outings to Cape Cod, in effect at the present time and to continue throughout the Summer season.

The affect of this rate reduction will be to make even more accessible to the general public this beautiful and world famous resort section.

The time required to reach this delightful playground is so short that it is ideal for refreshing one or two day inexpensive outings.

FAIR LAKE BOMOSEEN IN GREEN MOUNTAINS

In all the United States there is really no lovelier place than the Green Mountains of Vermont.

Lake Bomoseen is the largest lake in Vermont, being ten miles long, and there is an excellent hotel located there, conducted by John J. Quinlan. This hotel has 40 guest rooms and is supplied by its own farm with fresh vegetables and dairy products.

U. S. Should Not Side with Powers That Despoiled China

THIS country should mind its own business in China.

Whatever steps our engagements bind us to take were assumed as a friend of China and we should take care lest we pull out of the fire of Chinese independence the very valuable chestnuts of those foreign powers which have plundered China for so many years and in so many ways that they no longer regard the Chinese as having any right that anybody must respect.

The United States is the only nation that has not regarded China as the prey of civilization; it is the only nation that has not flouted all its pretensions of justice when they interfered with overseas larceny.

Let us beware lest we stupidly and sinfully align our power with the power of China's despoilers to make permanent those foreign outrages which are now so glibly referred to as "foreign interests."

Under our philosophy of government all this European and Japanese exploitation of China is just gigantic robbery.

There is nothing honest, nothing decent about it; it is all the unblushing colossal thievery of mass materialism at its hypocritical and flag-waving worst!

If these foreign nations had tried to do to any Central or South American country, with only a handful of people, what they have actually done to China, the most populous nation in the world, the Monroe Doctrine would have compelled us to go to war to prevent such threatened outrage.

Now, when the same nations do the same outrages in the Eastern Hemisphere we are expected to join hands with them and make the fruit of their plunder secure.

If the Monroe Doctrine is right; if self-government is right; if the cornerstone of this Republic is not rotten, we should at least condemn the plunderers of China; and the very thought of assisting them to quiet their dishonest titles is enough to cause every man who fought at Lexington and Bunker Hill to turn over in his grave.

What arrant hypocrisy there is in telling China to "put your house in order" — when we are taking the control of her house from her!

England never did to our revolutionary fathers half what she has done to China and what we are now expected to help her to continue to do to China.

What do you think the Colonists would have said to King George the Third if in reply to their protest he had sent this word to America:

> "I have taken your natural resources; I have determined what your laws shall be; I have made you receive and protect the missionaries of a faith which you do not want; I have set up courts where I try my own people when they violate your laws; I have stolen your seaports; I have made you smoke opium and I shall continue to make you smoke opium because it is profitable to my traders—now, set your house in order and keep your sacred treaty obligations!"

Let us be most careful not to sign the honest name of Uncle Sam to such a tyrannical ultimatum.

And now the climax of this grand effort to nail down international plunder in China is the cry of Bolshevism.

If you will let any infamy talk long enough it will finally wind up by pointing a trembling finger at Moscow.

If everything charged against Soviet Russia were true, the black total could not equal the wrong which the outside world has heaped upon China!

So-called civilization's plunder of China has been the shameless enthronement of barbaric force; it has been the denial of all professing which the Occident has made that it was fair and just, that it believed in fairness and justice.

If the loud slogans of liberty and self-government with which Europe decorates her speech were anything but affectations, Europe would get out of China today, give back what she has stolen, annul the treaties she has extorted from China at the cannon's mouth, and ask forgiveness for her sins.

Let America, the apostle of independence, take care lest she become guarantor of tyranny and pillage.

SAY! - TO WHOM WILL I SELL MY INDIA OPIUM, IF YOU TEACH HIM THAT STUFF?
J. BULL
ELEMENTARY MODERN ENLIGHTENMENT
THE YOUNG EDUCATED CHINAMAN
INDIA
O.P.WILLIAMS

JOHN BULL is more than interested over the educational movement in China—he is indignant over it! For centuries the vast population of China has been drugged into submissive lethargy by opium, of which Great Britain is the greatest producer. Millions and millions of people under the influence of the juice of the British grown poppy have lived from infancy to old age in ignorance and poverty, without the initiative or ambition to develop their nation to take its proper place among the powers of the world.

Now come the few vigorous, intelligent young Chinese, eager to lift their countrymen from the morass of ignorance and inaction through education. John Bull arises to protest. If China becomes a wholly enlightened nation, what will Britain do with its opium production, since China is the greatest consumer of opium?

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

OH, isn't it a grand and glorious sensation—that "Monday Morning feeling!"

When you get all the men out of the house!

Helen Rowland

When you close the door after the last week-end guest, and after HIM—the lord of your heart and your choice accounts!

When, at last, you can gather up all his "playthings" and scattered newspapers and cigarette stubs and burnt matches and throw them into the trash basket.

When you can collect his soiled linen and send it to the laundry, and put away all his shoes and slippers and fishing tackle and garden tools and get them out of sight.

When you can revel in the sweet knowledge that for eight whole, long delicious hours, nobody will ask you where you put his old cap.

What you did with the mucilage.

Where you keep the white shoe-cleaner.

Who's been playing with the garden hose or monkeying with the car [illegible]

What you did with the monkey wrench.

When breakfast will be ready—when luncheon will be ready—when dinner will be ready—what you've got to eat—why you didn't have something else.

When you can possess your soul in the peaceful thought that nobody will tramp mud on the rugs, scratch up the flowers with golf sticks, throw lighted matches in the waste basket, drop burning cigars on the potted ferns let the water run over in the bath-tub, get shaving soap down the water pipes, putter around the cook, rob the ice-box, complain of the heat or bring the neighbors in unexpectedly for lunch.

When you can restore order and normalcy out of chaos, get the smoke out of the curtains, soothe the frazzled nerves of the maid in the kitchen, and get the wheels going 'round smoothly in the household for another whole, whole week.

When you can pull down the window shades, close your tired eyes, and sink down exhausted but sereno and happy in the most COMFORTABLE chair in the house!

• • •

Alas, no home is complete without a HUSBAND around it, once a week, any more than it is without a clock, a cat or a potted palm, but—

Oh, ISN'T it a grand and glorious thing—that "Monday morning feeling?"

CHRISTIANITY HELPS MAN TO SUCCESS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A RECENT article in The Church Times of London deals mercilessly with a book I recently wrote, entitled "Why I Am a Christian."

Its objection to the book seems to be that it booms "Christianity as a good business proposition."

"Our Lord," says The Church Times, "seems to be, in his view, a glorified American business man. If not, what is the sense of this sentence, 'Jesus is the great Master Artist in the business of getting along'?"

The Christian Century comments upon this to the effect that the weakness of American Christianity is that it is under the peril of making obvious success the end and the test of the religious life.

With all due respect to these authorities, the position is insisted upon that being a Christian is best, in the average, for the purposes of getting along.

It is found that the extreme orthodox and fundamentalists and others who lean backward in their adherence to the old standards, and also the irreligious people on the outside who do not believe in Christianity at all, are a unit in thinking that Christianity is entirely a useless belief.

The notion seems to be rather dominant that the one thing that characterizes Christianity and the following of Jesus is its uselessness in this world.

There can be no doubt that at times a strict adherence to the rules of Christ leads to sacrifice, to failure and to misery.

But at the same time these are exceptions to the general rule. The proposition still holds that Christianity applied with common sense to all the affairs of life is about the best means of getting along.

One reason for the success of Christian Science and of its half-brother, Jewish Science, is the fact that they use religion.

Religion is not something to be held merely as an opinion, and a dangerous one, but something that can be utilized in our daily living.

As a rule a man can be a better husband, a better father, a better citizen, and get more out of life by following the teachings of Christ than otherwise. This is a statement of averages, and it is believed that in most cases it holds true.

The difference between a philosopher and one who thinks wildly is that the former believes in averages and the other in exceptions.

The laws of Christ are the laws of business and the laws of commerce, and they are best for the purposes of getting along. This conclusion is adhered to in spite of the attacks of both the ultra orthodox and the irreligious.

The fact remains that to me Christianity is true mostly because it presents the best means for making a success of one's life. Outward success does not always conform to inward success, but as a rule any man that will use the sayings of Jesus with common sense all his life will get along better than any man who will not.

Christianity is not profit-seeking nor a means of profit-getting, but it is a means of right living and a means to eventual success in the largest sense. A man will get along better in this world and in the next if he adheres to its teachings than if he does not.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

NOW, many serve the glowing gods of place, the gods that have the power to lift man high above the puny creatures of his race, the multitudes that stare as he goes by. And many bow at Mammon's golden shrine, so blinded by the glitter of the place, so drunk and muddied by the heady wine they cannot see the leer upon his face. Still others are the votaries of love, on worship bent in spite of sighs and pains; for them the murmurs of the cooing dove, for them the tidal and pallid moon enchains. But all are mocked by gold and high estate, their grasp upon the gauds they sought grows weak, until they turn away, importunate, for brighter boons and surer joys to seek.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

No Money for Rent

Helping Hand Editor:

I am the mother of five children and am in very poor health, unable to go out and work. My husband is in the hospital with a fractured collarbone and it will be some time before he is able to work. I owe two months' rent. Also owe gas bill. We are very much in need of clothing. I have girls, twelve and seven, and boys, five, three and two. The neighbors have been very good to us in the line of food. Landlord is looking for money each week and I can't pay a cent. If you investigate you will find out that everything is as I represent.

MRS. G. L. M.

Need Clothing

Helping Hand Editor:

My boy, who takes size 34, is greatly in need of clothing. My husband has not been well for a long time; also any infant's clothing will be greatly appreciated. MRS. M. R.

Alone in World

Helping Hand Editor:

I am 76 years old and crippled with rheumatism. I am alone in this world and need shirts size 16, shoes 8 or 9 and pants size 40. I am not able to work and will greatly appreciate this help. CHARLES.

Others Need Aid

An elderly lady not wishing to stay alone nights will give a good home to a needy woman. Could earn extra money by working for others in the neighborhood, if desired.

MRS. M. D. 1, widow with three children, would appreciate an ice chest and hasn't the money to purchase one.

MRS. M. B. 3, husband without work a long time, asks for a Summer dress, size 38, for herself and underwear and shirts for husband who takes size 40.

MRS. M. B. wishes to thank kind reader who sent her package of children's clothing. Everything came in very handy.

Mrs. A. M. G. writes of a very worthy family in her neighborhood. The man is unable to work and they need clothing very badly. Woman needs all kinds of clothing, size 46, shoes 6, boys 15 (large for age), boy 1 and girl 3. She will be glad to make over for them.

Mrs. Marie C., whose husband is just starting to work after being idle a long time, asks for some infant's clothing and a baby carriage. Owes lots of bills and cannot get these things.

Mrs. Mary E. S. would like to adopt a little girl from three to ten years of age.

Mrs. F. M. M., whose husband has deserted her and a little girl three years old, expects the stork soon and would appreciate some baby things, also clothing for herself, size 36.

Mrs. Mary W., whose husband has T. B. and not working for two years, would like to get an oil stove that some kind reader is not using. Has only a boy of fourteen working. Lives in Taunton.

Mary C. appeals for clothing for a little orphan boy, eight. She is his aunt, but is very poor herself and has been sick for the past few months. Also would appreciate a stroller for the year-old baby.

Mrs. G. C. needs clothing for boys, ten, seven and six, and girl, two. Husband out of work.
